Russians Advance On All Fronts in Spile of Weather

Moscow Reports Wide Gains and "Most Serioous Fighting"

Germans Admit Retreat in Voronezh Area to a
"New Line"

By EDDY GILMORE

MOSCOW, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Russians plunged forward on all fronts from Leningrad to the North Caucasus today, capturing one of the important refining centers of the doomed Stalingrad garrison, and driving west of Voronezh to within seventy miles of Kursk. (The Germans announced a retreat west of Voronezh to a new, shortened line despite "most serious fighting and weather." The Stalingrad resistance was termed unshaken. Violent Russian attacks in the frigid land southeast of Lake Ilmen by "numerically superior forces" were declared unsuccessful. Other Russian drives were reported near Lake Ladoga, on the western front opposite Moscow and in the Caucasus.)

High Officers Captured

The noon communique listed a general, three colonels and four lieutenant-colonels among the captives, increasing by the hour, in attacks on the doomed Stalingrad forces. Fewer than 8,500 isolated and hungry men, short of ammunition, were said to remain in the trap.

Russian forces striking out from Tuapse on the Black Sea of the western Caucasus recaptured Neftegorsk, twenty-five miles southwest of Maikop. Tass said an oil refining industry, noted for production of aviation fuel, was located at Neftegorsk. It was partly evacuated and partly destroyed when the Germans took the region in the summer. Near the city are oil sources rivaling those of Grozny.

Apkeronskaya, six miles nearer to Maikop, also was captured. The capture of Gorskhechne on the Vahuki-Kastomoe railway placed the Russian drive on the Voronezh front midway between Moscow and Stalingrad, within seventy-two miles of Kursk. Just to the south, the Russians are seventy-eight miles from Kharkov, hub of the whole German positions in South Russia.

Counter Attacks Fail
The enemy was counter-attacking in the North Caucasus in a vain effort to stem the Russian drive that threatened to encircle all his men in the Caucasus. Despite these desperate German efforts, the Russians said they seized a number of populated places overnight and dislodged the Red army was driving nearer Kropotkin and Tik-

Folkes Partially Identifies Knife

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28 (AP)—Robert Folkes, twenty-year old negro charged with murder in the slaying of an ensign's bride aboard a train, was confronted with three knives today and, while failing to identify any of them, later admitted, Det. Capt. Verne Rasmussen said, that one "might be" the murder weapon. Rasmussen said the knives were taken from the dining car on the train on which Mrs. Martha James, pretty wife of Naval Ensign Richard F. James was fatally stabbed in lower berth thirteen while enroute to California last Saturday. The detective reported Folkes, a dining car cook, has confessed the killing after making a number of conflicting statements regarding his activities in the night of the slaying.

Bethlehem Corporation Plans Ship Every Day, Eugene Grace Declares

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP)—"We propose to build a ship a day, every day, including Sundays and holidays," said Eugene G. Grace, master shipbuilding and steel maker, today. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corp., made this statement in an interview outlining his company's mammoth war program for 1943, in connection with issuance of his quarterly and preliminary annual earnings statement. Net income for 1942 was indicated at $25,387,760, after taxes of $188,940,000. This was substantially under the net of $34,457,796 for 1941, when the tax total was much smaller at $110,002,700. Jap-Americans To Serve U. S. Under New Plan

Fifteen Hundred Will Become Members of Armed Forces

HONOLULU, Jan. 28 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons reported today he had been directed to induct 1,500 Americans of Japanese descent as volunteers in the United States army.

The statement by the commander of the Hawaiian department, United States army, followed word from Washington that the army had plans for a combat unit of loyal Japanese-Americans.

General Emmons, who also is military governor of Hawaii, said "these volunteers will be formed into combat units on the mainland and will, when trained, be sent into an active theater of operation."

A large percentage of the officers will be citizens of Japanese ancestry.

Details Coming Soon
"The places of induction, the age limit, and other information will be announced at the earliest practicable date."

"Once in a great while," the general said, "an opportunity presents itself to recognize an entire section of this country for its performance of duty. All people of the Hawaiian Islands have contributed generously to our war effort. Among these have been Americans of Japanese descent."

"Their role has not been an easy one. Open to distrust because of their racial origin and discriminated against in certain fields of defense effort, they nevertheless have borne their burdens without complaint and have added materially to the strength of the Hawaiian area."

New Indications Of Allied Drive Seen in London

Long Conference Believed To Herald Great Offensive

By EDWARD D. BALL
LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The completion at General Eisenhower's North African headquarters of a forty-eight-hour conference among the highest military authorities of the United States and Britain raised strong indications today that a great Allied blow soon would fall upon the enemy in the Mediterranean in preparation for the ultimate spring into Europe.

The Axis, apparently anticipating the all-out attack, put out reports through the Paris and Vichy radios saying that British-American forces concentrated in the regions of Medjez El Bab and Bou Aradja already had "begun an offensive against the Axis forward positions" in Tunisia and that in the southern sector strong American and French forces were massing for a companion offensive.

No such present activity was indicated from Allied North African headquarters, the communique reporting that activity on the Tunisian front had been confined to patrolling.

Would Trap Rommel

The co-ordinated drives, which the enemy seemed to fear, would be aimed at cutting the Axis corridor into three segments to prevent a full juncture of Field Marshal Rommel's army, retreating from Libya, with the Tunisian Axis army of General von Arnim.

This would involve driving a spearhead from Medjez El Bab to the coast, isolating the Tunis-Bizerte area; and another from Maknassy to the coast between Sfax and Gabes, separating the central Axis-held sector from the enemy forces which Rommel is trying to mass behind the Marethe line in Eastern Tunisia, after his debacle in Libya.

Earlier this week, American advance units were officially reported operating in the vicinity of Maknassy, only thirty-three miles inland from Rommel's coastal route of retreat.

During the day, a Cairo communique announced that the British Eighth army had been in contact with Rommel's forces as early as yesterday about the town of Sabraha, a small port roughly midway between Tripoli and the Tunisian border. The pace of the pursuing British had been somewhat slowed by the rocky and gully-cut terrain but it was expected to rise now since the British are moving into open, flat country dotted here and there with marshes.

Military Heads Confer
The conference at Eisenhower's headquarters revolved about what was held by military principals who had sped eastward after attending the historic Churchill-Roosevelt meeting at Casablanca.

House Gets Bill To Curb Strikes Of Labor Unions

May Be Subjected To Federal Anti-Racketeering Law

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—A bill to subject labor unions to the 1934 federal anti-racketeering law was reported to the House today by its Judiciary committee.

Its sponsors privately described it as "a trial balloon to test the sentiment of Congress on labor legislation." One proponent, who could not be quoted by name, predicted that if it is passed, it will be followed by other bills requiring unions to file annual financial statements and to conduct strike votes by secret ballot of the entire membership.

An identical racketeering bill was approved by the Judiciary committee last year but was sidetracked by the Rules committee after protests from labor leaders that it would outlaw legitimate activities.

Aimed at Racketeers

The 1934 act, aimed at gangsters and underworld racketeers, makes robbery or extortion in interstate commerce a federal offense but specifically exempts legitimate labor disputes from its coverage. This exemption was held by the supreme court to cover the case of union truck drivers in New York City who allegedly halted trucks entering the city from out of the state and by intimidation compelled the truckers to hire a New York union driver or pay his fee.

Pay-as-You-Go Tax Plan Given Strong Support

But First Installment of 1942 Levy May Not Be Forgiven

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—A high official indicated today the treasury might be willing to support a compromise for the Ruml pay-as-you-go plan, through cancellation of part of 1942 personal income taxes, if necessary to put the great majority of the nation's 40,000,000 individual federal taxpayers on a current basis quickly.

By FRANCIS M. LE MAY

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Confronted by widespread public insistence on a "painless" method of collecting wartime income taxes, Congress formally set out today to devise a pay-as-you-go system as quickly as legislative processes permit.

At first session since the seventy-eighth Congress convened, the House Ways and Means committee called public hearings to begin next Tuesday on current collection plans, separating this subject from general tax problems, for purposes of speed.

Meanwhile, forces were marshaling for and against the plan offered by Beardsley Ruml, chairman of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. He has suggested that all 1942 personal income taxes be skipped, and that this year's payments be applied to this year's taxes.

Position of Treasury

There appeared no doubt that the Treasury department would oppose the omission of all 1942 income taxes, but legislators felt it might be willing to erase last year's obligations for the lower tax brackets, probably the normal six per cent tax and the first surtax bracket of thirteen per cent total.

Virtually all twenty-five members of the Ways and Means committee appeared insistent upon writing a pay-as-you-go system as quickly as possible, but Chairman Doughton (D-NC) expressed doubt that the legislation could be brought out before March 15—and it might be summer before it reaches the president's desk.

In any event, returns must be filed by March 15 and the tax paid as provided in present law, until the law is changed. Both the treasury and Chairman Doughton emphasized that regardless of what legislative action is taken, taxpayers will have to pay their first quarterly installment on or before March 15, as usual.

"Worst Headaches"

The chairman expressed hope that the current collection system, details of which he described as one of the worst headaches we ever had, would be devised in time to affect a large portion of the 40,000,000 income taxpayers at least for part of 1943, with current tax deductions being made from wages and salaries weekly, bi-weekly or monthly.

The Ways and Means committee will meet tomorrow to take up Doughton's bill to raise the national debt limit from $125,000,000,000 to $210,000,000,000, and this is expected to be reported out immediately with little, if any, controversy in view of the money demands for waging war.

Hearings Open Tuesday

Tuesday's public hearings on pay-as-you-go probably will open with witnesses from the treasury. The department has made a study of the current payment principle, and will have definite suggestions for the committee.

Indications were that it might

Compulsory Labor for All Germans May Be Enforced by Death Penalty

LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP)—A drastic new decree instituting compulsory labor service for all German men from 16 to 65 and all women from 17 to 45 was announced by the German radio today with strong hints that the death penalty will be applied to slackers.

The announcement was made after days of an intense propaganda barrage in the German press and radio warning that Adolf Hitler's Reich is at a crisis in the war because of continued reverses on the eastern front and that the situation calls for the most bitter sacrifices.

Hitler May Speak
In their discussions of the growing seriousness of the situation Berlin radio commentators have been dwelling with increasing frequency on the date of Jan. 30, the tenth anniversary of Hitler's coming to power, and there were numerous suggestions that he might use the occasion Saturday to discuss full implications of the drastic measure, including the death penalty.

One German broadcast said the anniversary "is generally expected in Berlin to be marked by the presentation of some kind of statements by prominent warriors."

"The extraordinary fierceness of the fighting against the Soviet Russians has led to a fresh impetus of determination in Germany," one Berlin broadcast explained. "New armies therefore are being put up and jobs held by these men must be filled."

At Bottom of Barrel

This scraping of the bottom of the barrel by Germany for the last reserves in manpower to keep her war machine running was commented upon by the Swiss newspaper, Le Courrier, as quoted in a dispatch received here.

"Germany's position closely resembles that of 1918," the paper said. "Her last reserves are now being mobilized and will leave the nation's human resources exhausted."

RED TROOPS ADVANCE IN BOMBED STALINGRAD

Russian infantryman move up through the ruins of a street in Stalingrad in pursuit of Nazi troops before they were thrown out of the city. A Soviet communique says that it is only a matter of days before the Germans trapped outside the city are wiped out. It is estimated that only 5,000 Nazi soldiers are left of the 220,000 that originally attacked Stalingrad. In the last ten days 40,000 Germans were slain.

Radio To Flash All Clear Sign Starting Feb. 1

Col. Barrett Announces
Latest Air Raid Plan for District

BALTIMORE, Jan. 28 (AP)—Col. Henry S. Barrett, state air raid precautions director, announced today that the air raid all clear signal in Maryland will be transmitted by radio beginning Feb. 17 under the new system decided upon by the army for sixteen eastern states.

The Eastern Defense Command, which made the alert signal a solid blast of the whistles and reserved the short sharp signal for the warning that enemy planes were overhead, left to the individual cities and states the decision on the all clear signal.

All of the new warnings become effective one minute after midnight Feb. 17.

No Test Blackouts

No test blackouts or alerts will be held between now and Feb. 17, Col. Barrett said.

Col. Barrett added, however, that should an actual raid occur the old warning system would be used.

"It is possible we may supplement the radio all clear with other type of signals," Barrett said. "No one should complain about any all clear difficulties. Other cities have just as much trouble under the new set-up. And, after all, the all clear is the least important phase of air raid precautions."

He praised the new system as "a splendid thing," adding that "I have been fighting for something like it for some time. It has been very much needed."

Provides More Time

"The 'blue' (continuous blast) normally will be sounded twenty minutes before the 'red' (short, sharp notes). This will give us more time to organize civilian defense activities, clear the streets and see that everything is ready for the actual attack."

"The same set of signals will be used for air raid tests as for real raids. We'll have to teach the public the air raid signals all over again. It shouldn't be a difficult job. There'll be only two types of signals to remember."

VOLUNTEERS FOR SERVICE COME FIRST UNDER NEW DRAFT PLANS

BALTIMORE, Jan. 28 (AP)—Those who volunteer for induction will get first choice on the armed service they prefer under the new selective service system effective Monday, Comdr. C. H. Bryant, assistant state draft director, said today.

The new system, established as part of the recent manpower directive, permits assignment of selectees to the navy and marine corps, as well as the army.

Comdr. Bryant said that plans were being made to allow selectees to make their choice. "This will not always be possible, owing to limited navy and marine corps quotas," he added, "but we are going to do our best."

Beginning Monday, selectees will undergo the same physical examination as before, but afterward will face a preliminary classification committee, draft officials explained.

The committee, composed of army, navy and marine corps enlisted personnel, will learn the service choice of the selectees and their qualifications.

After interviewing selectees, the committee first will assign volunteers to the branches they request, regular inductees next, and finally, if the quotas still are not filled, will choose the best qualified men for the remaining vacancies.

Davis Defends Labor Board in Notice to Lewis

Chairman Denies Policies
Violate No-Strike
Agreement

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Chairman William H. Davis in effect served notice on John L. Lewis today that the War Labor Board will not entertain any argument that its wage policies violate conditions of labor's no-strike agreement.

Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, has promised coal miners he will get them a "wholesome increase" in wages, irrespective of the labor board's policies, when current union contracts expire in April. He also has said the wage policy violates the no-strike agreement.

Taking recognition of Lewis's later contention, Davis issued a statement, which, listing the provisions of the agreement, made no mention of wages.

He went on to say that the wage policy "was adopted by the unanimous vote of the public, labor and industry members," and followed "the clear mandate given it by the Congress" and the "specific instructions" of President Roosevelt.

The policy, known as the "Little Steel Formula," permits a wage increase of up to fifteen per cent to compensate for increased living costs since Jan. 1, 1941. It has been indicated that the coal miners would demand increases above this formula's allowance.

Baruch Backs Plan To Rationalize
Industry for Production of Goods

By IRVING PERLMETER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Bernard M. Baruch, 72-year-old official doctor of the nation's war production, endorsed today a tentative war production board scheme to "rationalize" a large segment of industry for more efficient output of military goods.

The plan calls, among other things, for less duplication of effort by various factories, and more simplification of design and models. Under it a whole industry might be operated as a single plant.

"Rationalization," Baruch commented, "is just a $10 word for something my old war industries board and the army's industrial

Four Army Planes Used To Carry Party from North Africa

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The White House disclosed tonight that President Roosevelt had paused in Liberia on his way back from the historic conference in North Africa to pay his respects to President Edwin Barclay and review American negro troops stationed there.

A dispatch datelined at Monrovia today and received at the White House tonight said Mr. Roosevelt also had inspected a large Firestone rubber plantation in the republic founded in 1922 by negro freedmen from this country.

Visits Arab Town

The president and Prime Minister Churchill, upon concluding their conference at Casablanca, where they mapped plans to force unconditional surrender upon the Axis, motored some 150 miles southward to Marrakech and spent the night in that ancient Berber and Arab town at the foot of the Atlas mountains.

They parted the following day, and the American chief executive flew to Liberia with one intervening stop.

Use Army Planes

The dispatch from Monrovia said the president and his party, traveling in two four-motor army transports, landed at Roberts field about fifty miles from Monrovia. They were greeted there at the officers' mess hall by President Barclay and Clarence L. Simpson, Liberian secretary of state, and by Frederick P. Hibbard, American charge d'affaires. After lunch the two presidents, the dispatch said, bounced out to a parade ground in a jeep and reviewed the Forty-First engineers and a part of a defense detachment commanded by Col. A. A. Kirchoff.

A band played the American and Liberian national anthems and rendered full honors and the two presidents then toured up and down the lines of troops.

Visits Rubber Plantation

George Seybold, general manager of the Firestone plantation, took over the party and drove them to the rubber plantation through African villages with their straw thatched huts.

The plantation, an American sponsored project, the dispatch said, is supplying the United States yearly with many pounds of critical war materials and is expanding its output steadily.

Pack of U-Boats Sinks Four Ships

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 28 (AP)—A wolf-pack of Axis submarines struck a heavy blow at a convoy of merchant ships off the South American coast early in January and sank four vessels, seamen returning here reported.

The sinkings raised to 608 the number of United Nations and neutral ships lost in the Western Atlantic since Pearl Harbor.

News of the attack, the first by a pack of subs in the area, underscored the warning of high government officials that the submarine menace remains serious in 1943.

Despite the rapid fire attack by undersea raiders the loss of life was said to have been light. Survivors from three of the ships said twenty-eight men were missing from their vessels, and some of these were believed to have reached safety.

Yeggs Take Sale
And Owner's Truck

BALTIMORE, Jan. 28 (AP)—The yeggs who carried away the Enterprise Roofing Company's 500-pound safe added insult to injury—they used the company's truck to do it. Company officials said there was $300 cash and a $1,000 war bond in the safe. The truck was recovered but not the safe.

See Less Planning

He described the proposal as meaning less detailed planning in Washington government offices. Industry would be given more responsibility for trimming off peacetime frills and duplications and arranging itself for maximum war production.

Most war agencies already have their industry advisory committees, he conceded, but these groups are so split up they don't function properly. Instead, he suggested that each major industry—such as steel—have a single powerful committee

Kirke Simpson Sees Tunisian Drive at Hand

Believes Conference of Leaders Has Axis on Anxious Seat

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer
Whatever the actual purpose of the follow-up conference of British and American military leaders with General Eisenhower and Alexander in the wake of Casablanca developments, it can hardly contribute to Axis peace of mind.

The coming crucial battle of Tunisia must be the central pivot of Casablanca war policy-making. Elimination of the last Axis foothold in Africa is the quickest road to achieve any of the strategic objectives revealed or intimated in connection with the Casablanca session. Whether it is to help Russia; to curb the still grave U-boat menace; or to prepare an African springboard for Allied invasion of the continent, Tunisia is the obvious hub of the global war wheel.

Single Command Likely
Once the final siege lines in Tunisia are set, a junction of the east and west jaws of the great Allied nutcracker around the siege perimeter will be established. At that moment if not before, military expediency would dictate the establishment of a single Allied overall command in Africa.

It is possible that the session at Eisenhower headquarters was to implement promptly decisions taken at Casablanca both as to ultimate unification of all Allied forces in Africa under a supreme command and as to supply line priorities to be put into effect once a junction is made. Once the east and west Allied jaws do meet, a reshuffling of the logistics of the merged companions to get greater efficiency out of available cargo tonnage should be possible.

There have been many hints apparently based on good if unidentified authority both on this side of the Atlantic and in London that one aftermath of Casablanca is to be looked for is appointment of an Allied generalissimo for the European theater as a whole.

Eisenhower as Alexander?
Eisenhower and his British colleague, General Alexander, Imperial commander in chief in 1937 and now conquered Italian North Africa, head up the only land fronts where Allied troops other than the Russians are in contact with the foe as yet. If a new overall command in Europe, or only in Africa, is to be set up, both Eisenhower and Alexander would have to be consulted.

Assuming that a merged supreme Allied command in Europe or in Africa is to be expected soon, another opportunity to dispel the mists of French political factionalism or military jealousy would arise.

Fighting Frenchmen, back in action against the foe on a growing scale, must rate consideration in the makeup of a supreme command whatever its scope.

Thomas Scores Army Flier Who Criticized Labor

Remarks of CIO Leader Believed Hurlled at Rickenbacker

BUFFALO, N. Y., Jan. 28 (AP)—R. J. Thomas, president of the CIO United Automobile Workers, said tonight "an army flier of note has taken advantage of his popularity by acting as the spearhead" of an attack on labor.

"I challenge this man or any other spokesman of anti-labor interests to point to any organization whose record of service to the nation is better than that of the UAW-CIO and of its parent body, the Congress of Industrial Organizations," Thomas asserted in a radio address prepared for broadcast.

Criticized Rickenbacker
Thomas did not name the "army flier" but last Saturday he criticized Captain Eddie Rickenbacker for his comments on labor, asserting Rickenbacker had been misinformed "by some manufacturing groups in this country."

Rickenbacker in a Detroit war plant last week asserted that "if you could only understand what our boys are doing" on the war fronts "you would not worry about eight hours a day, overtime or double time."

Asserting "we have made our full contribution to the war effort," Thomas continued:

Reports Sacrifices
"We have made sacrifices whenever our commander-in-chief has found them necessary. We are prepared to make further necessary sacrifices because we believe that nothing compares in importance with the necessity for victory and the crushing of the Axis powers."

The UAW president said "we vigorously resent the efforts of tyrants to stab us in the back."

"In view of these facts and by war department authority I have been designated to offer Americans of Japanese ancestry an opportunity to serve their country."

"This opportunity is in the form of voluntary combat services in the armed forces. The manner of response and record of these men will be one of the best answers to those who question the loyalty of American citizens of Japanese descent in Hawaii."

On and after Feb. 17, violators of air raid regulations may be banished from the eastern defense area or fined $5,000 and sentenced to a year in prison, with penalties ranging upward to these limits according to the degree of the offense.

Broad Revision Of Liquor Laws Asked by Board

Bill Requesting Changes To Be Introduced Shortly

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 28 (AP)—The first broad revision of Maryland's liquor laws since repeal was recommended today by an eighteen-man commission, which announced that a bill embodying the suggested changes would be offered shortly in the Assembly.

The principal changes in the present system would include the appointment of a state liquor commissioner to direct law enforcement, to provide for appeals from rulings of local boards to the courts, and to shorten somewhat the hours of sale.

In addition, a state police force detail would be provided to aid the liquor commissioner in uncovering violations of the laws.

The commission, headed by William E. McCloy, of Baltimore, was appointed by Governor O'Connor last Nov. 19, and since that time has been conferring with state and local officials and holding public hearings on various phases of the problem.

O'Connor Probably Favorable
Since the commission was appointed by the governor, it was assumed that the proposed bill would be supported in its essential phases by the administration, although there was no comment on the report from the executive offices today.

Sen. Joseph R. Byrnes agreed to introduce the bill, but it was not offered at today's Senate session.

"At the outset we wish to express the opinion," the commission said, "after a study of other liquor laws throughout the country, that the fundamental policy and the essential groundwork of the Maryland laws controlling alcoholic beverages are sound, sensible and should be preserved."

"For instance, the dual license system, whereby beer and light wines are made readily accessible to the people at low cost, whereas hard liquors are surrounded by more restrictions and carry a higher fee, in our judgment promotes temperance and moderation in the drinking habits of the people. This system, we believe, should be preserved."

Ask Better Enforcement
"In order to preserve it, however, we are firmly of opinion that enforcement of the law throughout the state must be measurably increased; and the principal changes in the law here recommended, and embodied in a bill which we have prepared for submission to the General Assembly, are directed towards this end."

The principal recommendations of the report:

1. That a state liquor commission be appointed by the governor to have supervision over enforcement.

2. That the state police department assign a portion of its force, consisting of not more than ten officers, to be known as the alcoholic beverage enforcement division of the state police and to aid the commissioner.

3. That the systems of handling the issuance, suspension and revocation of licenses followed by the various counties be standardized as far as possible.

4. That appeals from the local boards' rulings be taken to the circuit courts and to city court in Baltimore.

5. That hours of sale be shortened to provide week-night closing at 1 a. m., and that no sales be permitted on Sundays between 1 a. m. and 2 p. m.

6. That package sales be divorced from sales by the drink, and that package stores close at 9 p. m. instead of midnight.

7. That the term "restaurant" be abolished so far as license classification in Baltimore city is concerned.

"The bill defines extortion as 'the obtaining of property from another, with his consent, induced by wrongful use of actual or threatened force, violence, or fear, or under color of official right.' It describes robbery as 'the unlawful acquisition of property by means of actual or threatened force, or violence, or fear of injury, immediate or future, x. x. x.' Resort to robbery or extortion to interfere with interstate commerce would be punishable by a maximum penalty of twenty years imprisonment and $10,000 fine, the penalty being applicable to anyone conspiring or acting in concert to commit the offense."

Labor union spokesmen contended in previous hearings that the definitions were so broad that all members of a union voting for a strike or establishment of a picket line might be subject to prosecution.

Maryland Swept By Record Storm

Two Lives Lost and Damage Is Reported Heavy in Some Places

A bitter sleet storm swept through Maryland yesterday (Thursday), forcing at least one war plant to close until further notice, crippling transit facilities and snapping power lines under the icy load. No immediate relief was forecast.

The death toll in the storm was two.

The Glenn L. Martin aircraft company sent first shift workers home and ordered the second and third shifts not to report because of the storm conditions.

Only the lower tip of the Eastern Shore escaped the sting of the sleet and hail.

Baltimore city had little real snow, the fall being a heavy sleet with as much water content as seventeen inches of snow.

Roads Ice-Glazed
The ice-glazed roads cut automobile, transit and interstate bus movements and traffic jammed near the state's defense plants. Trees fell and even local transit facilities were well behind schedule.

Schools were closed in Washington and Anne Arundel counties and in Cambridge.

Ice-sheathed power lines snapped and took out telegraphic communications from Baltimore to Salisbury.

Both storm deaths were results of Baltimore sled accidents. Two small boys were killed in such mishaps.

The State Roads Commission dispatched 190 trucks and 550 men out to cinder roads in an attempt to keep traffic moving slowly. Some important traffic arteries, such as the Washington boulevard linking Baltimore and Washington, were termed unsafe for driving.

Power Lines Crippled
Suburban Baltimore, Wicomico county and southern Maryland apparently were the hardest hit by the snapping of power lines and falling trees.

John R. Weeks, head of the Baltimore Weather Bureau, forecast no immediate relief. "The storm," he said, "seems likely to last throughout the night (Thursday) with steadily falling temperatures."

New Indications

This Mediterranean war council was attended for the United States by General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff; Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the navy; Lieut.-Gen. H. H. Arnold, commander in chief of army air forces, and other high officers.

For Britain the conferees were Field Marshal Sir John Dill, head of the British joint staff missions in Washington; Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, first sea lord; General Sir Harold Alexander, commander in chief in the Middle East; Vice Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, chief of combined operations (the Commandos), and others.

The conference lasted through two days.

The fact that all was centered about General Eisenhower and that General Alexander was present suggested that the Allies were planning a co-ordinate command for the whole of the Mediterranean.

General Eisenhower announced the receipt of this confident message from President Roosevelt to the American forces:

Message From Roosevelt
"My first visit to North Africa has given me increased assurance and a deeper feeling of pride in the leaders and men of the American armed forces."

"The officers and men who landed with the initial assault, those who are now carrying on at the front in Tunisia, and those who are training themselves for future combat are deserving of the highest commendation."

"I could not but note your alertness, your smartness and the pride you take in yourselves and your splendid equipment. I return to the United States with renewed confidence that the American soldiers, equipped with the best equipment the world can produce, led by men who have proved themselves in battle, and all imbued with the will to win, shall be victorious."

"Officers and men of the armed forces in North Africa—I commend you."

"ROOSEVELT, Commander in Chief."

While the North African and Cairo communiques reported little in the way of ground action, heavy and effective Allied air activity was noted.

Close Vote Sure On Edward Flynn

One Poll Has Senate Standing 48-48 on Nomination

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—One of the hottest controversies in years found senate supporters and opponents of President Roosevelt's nomination of Edward J. Flynn as minister to Australia almost deadlocked tonight on the basis of membership polls.

An Associated Press canvass which reached eighty-nine of the ninety-six members showed thirty-one senators publicly committed to vote against confirmation and thirty on record as supporting the president's choice.

Twenty-eight senators, including twenty Democrats and eight Republicans, either had not made up their minds or declined to say publicly how they would vote. Seven senators were away from Washington.

Senator Kilgore (D-W.Va.), who had not been listed on previous polls, said on his return to Washington today he would support the nomination.

One private poll indicated that if all senators were present and voting the result might be a forty-eight to forty-eight tie which could be broken by Vice President Wallace as presiding officer.

Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) who reported formally to the Senate yesterday's action of the Foreign Relations committee in approving the nomination by a 13 to 10 vote, conceded the issue was close.

Baruch Backs

geared not only to advise but to act. These committees would not be attached to a single government agency, such as WPB, but would be available to all government agencies at the same time.

Baruch, who was chairman of the war industries board in the first world war—in effect the Donald Nelson of 1918—expressed belief that each industry could solve its own shortages and rearrange its own production schedules to fit the war needs, instead of having Washington send out detailed instructions.

World Simplify Clothing
Examples are difficult because of military secrets involved. But one mentioned by Baruch involved simplification of clothing. To conserve material and machinery, to reduce the use of manpower needed in more vital industries or in the armed forces, the government might want the clothing industry to cut out hundreds of different models, colors and patterns, and concentrate on a few simple designs.

Under present practice, if such a program were decided upon, Washington officials would promulgate thousands of legalistic words describing down to the last detail what the government wanted done. Inevitably, there might be misunderstandings, mistakes, rebellion and public furore.

Under a rationalization plan, the government would call in a committee empowered by the clothing industry to act. The government would outline a general program, and charge the committee with working out the details and putting them into action.

How Plan Would Work
Manufacturer A might agree with his colleagues to stop making a whole line of different garments and make nothing but one model of a simplified shirt.

Manufacturer B would be assigned men's suits—making only the standardized model. And so on, until the industry as a whole—with due attention to work for small plants—was working as a team getting out a maximum of clothing with a maximum of material, machinery and labor.

Recently, when a dozen high officials were quarreling over dividing up the available inadequate supply of a certain mechanism, research proved that the one company which could supply enough of the mechanisms to satisfy everybody was loaded down instead with an artillery contract which could—and was—shifted to another concern.

Baruch's contention is that this kind of shifting around can only be done by industry itself.

Russians Advance

horetak, important rail junctions on the Rostov-Baku line.

The Reds were less than twenty-five miles from Kropotkin and forty miles from Tikhoretsk. Should these cities fall, the remaining Germans in the Caucasus would have great difficulty escaping.

(Secretary of War Stimson in Washington said the stiffened German resistance around Rostov indicated the Germans might be trying to evacuate their forces from the Caucasus. "There is a good chance that the Germans may be driven back to the point from which they started their summer offensive," Stimson said.)

Encircling Rostov
Dispatches said the Russians were tightening their semi-circle around Rostov as troops on the southern and southwestern fronts pressed forward.

The Russians are fifty-six miles away to the east on the lower Don, sixty miles away in the Salsk region, and less than seventy miles from Rostov in the north.

The capture of Ataman on the branch railway from Rostov to Salsk placed the Russians in the Salsk area only sixty miles from Rostov.

The communiqué reported continued offensive operations on the Volkov and Leningrad fronts but did not specify gains.

Anti-Violence Bill Offered At Annapolis

Would Prohibit Threats or Force during Labor Disputes

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 28 (AP)—The House of Delegates, in a stormy session today, received a bill which would make it unlawful to use force or threats of force in connection with any strike or labor dispute.

A number of arguments on relatively minor measures enlivened the House session, which lasted for an hour and forty minutes.

In contrast, the Senate held a routine half-hour session during which it passed six bills and received three, including one to shift the state small loans administrator to the office of the bank commissioner.

Anti-Violence Bill
The anti-violence bill, offered in the House by Delegate J. Howard Johnson (D-Wicomico) would make it a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $100 or six months' imprisonment, to use force or threats to attempt to prevent anyone from engaging in any lawful occupation.

"It shall be unlawful for any person acting in concert with one or more other persons," the bill continues, "to assemble at or near any place where a 'labor dispute' exists, and by force or violence or threats thereof, prevent or attempt to prevent any person from engaging in any lawful vocation."

Labor Dispute Defined
The proposal defines a labor dispute as any controversy between an employer and two or more of his employees.

The House adopted an unfavorable report of the Rules committee which would require that printed copies of all budget amendments be in the hands of House members at least twenty-four hours before any action was taken.

A resolution had been introduced on Jan. 20 by Delegate Jerome Robinson which would require that procedures to be followed, but the Rules committee handed down an unfavorable report on the grounds that it was "unlike to single out amendments to a particular bill for such action."

Thirteen new bills were introduced in the House, and twenty-two approved by the Senate also were received.

The controversy over the budget amendment was largely a personal matter between Robinson and White, majority floor leader.

Argue Over Budget
In arguing against the Rules committee's unfavorable report, Robinson said it should be rejected no matter what personal differences there may be.

White replied that "I have no personal differences with anyone in this House."

Please excuse me for my ignorance," Robinson replied sarcastically.

"The gentleman has again made an attack upon me," White said, "if he does not stop, I announce right now that I'm ready to join combat for the rest of the session."

Robinson then continued his arguments that the House have a rule requiring the submission of printed budget amendments twenty-four hours before their introduction on third reading, and cited rules which he asserted led to "confusion of the Ways and Means committee in 1939."

White replied that Robinson had voted for the very rules he was now arguing against.

Finally, the House adopted White's motion calling for the adoption of the unfavorable report on Robinson's resolution.

Most of the bills received in the House today were minor or local measures.

Three Senate Bills
Two of the three new bills offered in the Senate were local measures. The third would remove the administrator of loan laws from the finance department to the jurisdiction of the bank commissioner.

The bank commissioner would appoint the administrator, rather than the governor, as is now the case. The salary of the position would remain at $4,000 a year.

The Senate passed two if its bills and four measures which originated in the House. Three of the bills which will now go to the governor for signature were repealers of obsolete sections, sponsored by the Legislative Council.

The other one finally passed as a proposal to reduce the bond which must be posted by the members of the state athletic commission from $10,000 to $5,000.

The Senate received nineteen bills passed by the House.

Unnerved offensive operations on the Volkov and Leningrad fronts but did not specify gains.

As the fight at Stalingrad neared its gory conclusion, taking its place with the decisive battles of history, the Russians said not a single air transport had gotten through to drop munitions or food to the pocketed Germans. Weakening fire indicated the enemy was running short of shells and dispatches said the last few transport planes destroyed were loaded with munitions.

ON GUADALCANAL

Army Air Power 4 to 1 Ahead of That of the Axis

Secretary of War Stimson Reports Growing Superiority

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The army's air power, in "brilliantly successful" operations around a globe, has established a four-to-one combat superiority over the aerial strength of the Axis, Secretary of War Stimson reported today.

In a review of the war's progress on all fronts, Stimson presented at his press conference a box score on the work of the army air forces in the last eleven months of 1942—a total of 1,349 enemy aircraft shot down or probably destroyed in aerial combat, against losses of only 309 American planes.

Nearly a third of these enemy losses were inflicted by army fliers in December, when, Stimson said, air operations increased considerably due to the North African campaign. In that month, 419 Axis aircraft were definitely or probably destroyed with a loss of only ninety-eight army planes.

Explains "Probables"
"Probables" are claimed by the air forces, Stimson explained, only when the enemy planes are seen falling out of control or in flames, but the actual crash—or abandonment of the stricken ship by a parachuting pilot—is not observed.

The score of enemy losses, said the secretary, was confined to the bag of aerial combat—no enemy planes brought down by anti-aircraft fire were included. However, the army losses of aircraft in his report includes those destroyed by enemy anti-aircraft guns.

Stimson also disclosed at the press conference that American casualties to date in Tunisia have totaled 1,258 dead wounded and missing.

As to other developments of the war Stimson suggested that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill "undoubtedly were heartened" during their conference at Casablanca by these reports from the battle fronts:

Reports from Front
(1) In recent days German officials have begun to tell the German public for the first time of the Nazi military disaster in Russia.

(2) Marshal Rommel's forces, in full flight toward Tunisia, abandoned the Libyan capital of Tripoli without a fight, pausing only for an unsuccessful effort to destroy harbor facilities and air fields.

(3) French and American troops in Tunisia threw back a German thrust designed to widen Rommel's corridor of escape along the coast.

(4) General MacArthur's Australian and American troops have cleaned the last of a force of 15,000 Japanese out of eastern New Guinea.

(5) The American troops on Guadalcanal in the Solomons are "steadily narrowing the area occupied by the Japanese and, considering the numbers engaged, are inflicting heavy casualties."

Would Cut School Year to 160 Days

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 28 (AP)—Sen. Joseph A. Wilmer (R-Charles) said today that he plans to introduce a bill which would cut the 180-day public school year to 160 days. This will be the second time in his eight years in the legislature that he has introduced a bill.

The bill would knock off the last school month, thus allowing school children to help out in the farm labor shortage which would be increasingly bad by next June, he said.

Must Have Been Quite a Spectacle

GEARY, Okla. (AP)—Coy Gwaltney couldn't see to hunt with his glasses on because they kept frosting over, so he laid them gently on a pile of picked cotton and went on hunting.

Some time later he returned to find cotton and glasses gone. They had been hauled off and run through the cotton gin.

Duesseldorf Hit Hard in Big RAF Raid on Germany

Hundreds of Tons of Fire Bombs and Explosives Dropped

By ALFRED E. WALL
LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Hundreds of tons of explosives and fire-bombs were delivered in blitz style on Duesseldorf last night by a heavy force of the biggest RAF bombers flying the night schedule of a stepped-up aerial offensive on Germany.

It was the 501st raid on the great industrial center. The air ministry, terming the attack "Duesseldorf's quickest blitz," said most of the thousands of bombs carried were dropped within 10 minutes of the 20-minute raid.

"Saturation Raid"
The report of one pilot indicated it was a "saturation raid," one so concentrated that it overwhelms the capacity of defenses to deal with the bombers. He noted that anti-aircraft fire, intense at first, gradually thinned out until there was little if any, flak.

Only six bombers were lost out of a force officially designated as "heavy," indicating several hundred planes were in action. In the last raid on Duesseldorf, on Oct. 9, 1942, the British lost thirty-one planes, but the disparity in losses probably was due to differences in weather conditions rather than to enemy action.

Attack on Dark Night
Last night was so black that the RAF pilots saw only a few enemy fighters as they plumped many 4,000-pound block-busters amid fire started by thousands of incendiaries to silhouette the targets.

Duesseldorf, called the administrative capital of the Ruhr although it is not actually in the industrial valley, is the home of steel plants, iron foundries, machine tool makers and armament works and is rated as important industrially as Essen.

Flynn Jury May Visit His Yacht

Giesler Likely to Request Members See Alleged Crime Scene

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 28 (AP)—Errol Flynn's defense rested its case today, with the stipulation by Attorney Jerry Giesler that he may request a visit by the jury to the luxurious yacht where the prosecution claims the film star seduced one of his two girl accusers.

The end of the defense case came abruptly after the state had completed its cross-examination of the actor, charged with statutory rape of teen aged Peggy La Rue Satterlee and Betty Hansen.

Giesler made his announcement after brief re-examination of the actor. The attorney referred to Flynn's statement on cross-examination that he had been worried during a visit paid by Miss Satterlee to the yacht when it was moored at Balboa.

Asked what had been troubling him, Flynn responded it had been the loss of his pet dog, which had strayed away a few hours earlier.

Earlier in the day Flynn was taken once again on a figurative voyage to the Pacific Isle of Catalina, and only once did he give the slightest indication he was getting tired of the questioning.

The case may go to the jury next Wednesday or Thursday. Deputy District Attorney Thomas Cochran said he will call perhaps six rebuttal witnesses. Giesler said after the trial adjourned for the day that he may ask permission to call one more witness for direct examination.

He estimated arguments would require two days.

West Virginia and Its Income Tax

HOPE is hereby expressed that administration members of the Maryland General Assembly are taking due note of what is going on over in the sister state of West Virginia respecting legislative action on the state income tax.

Although Governor Neely recommended only a twenty-five per cent reduction in that tax, the state legislature appears to be decidedly of the mind that the thing is not acceptable even with a further shaving and should be tossed out of the window.

At this writing, the House of Delegates had battered down all dilatory tactics interposed by administration forces and had enacted by an overwhelming vote a bill repealing the tax in its entirety. The measure was thus sent on to the Senate, which is expected to ratify the House action.

The tax was first adopted in the depression period and has been producing around $2,500,000 annually. But repeal supporters made the point that the state is getting more than that now from other sources. They have also pointed to the governor's budget as being a sort of economic monstrosity, both unwarranted and unnecessary in time of war and sacrifice because it calls for a total of $35,448,000 for the coming biennium whereas only $31,000,000 was appropriated for the current like period.

The situation existing in West Virginia finds parallel here in Maryland. The budget submitted by the governor of Maryland is likewise an "economic monstrosity" for the simple reason that, save only where motor revenue shrinkage resulting from war restrictions has naturally affected operations, the administration wants to continue on normal operations everywhere else, giving no heed to the need for government to make the same sacrifices the people are being called upon to make.

Maryland legislators will quite likely cut the governor's budget and cut the income tax farther than he recommends. This is the expectation of the citizenry. But it can be hoped that it will show as much heed herein to the mandate of the November elections as that demonstrated by the West Virginia solons, whose firmness respecting economy is bringing applause from the people.

An Alleganian Is Justly Honored

ADVANCEMENT of Judge D. Lindley Sloan, of this city, to the highest judicial position within the gift of the state, that of chief judge of the state court of appeals, of which he is senior member, is, as the Baltimore Sun says, so reasonable and normal that it can do nothing else than bring approval of the people generally throughout Maryland.

The advancement is recognition of sixteen years of distinguished service on the bench, and that recognition is amply merited. Judge Sloan's record there has been of such admirable quality that the appointment, while unique in that he is the first member of the Republican faith to attain it, is as pleasing as it is justified. The only regret is that Judge Sloan will soon reach the obligatory retirement age and that the people of Maryland will thus be too soon deprived of his active services. Nevertheless, the people, the governor and the judge are all entitled to congratulations.

Governor O'Connor appears to have made a satisfactory selection in naming Judge Rowland K. Adams to the vacancy on the appeals bench occasioned by the recent lamentable death of Chief Judge Carroll T. Bond. He has had nearly nine years of service on the supreme bench of Baltimore city, has made a good record and is thus qualified for appellate work.

Women Furnish Work Yardstick

NEW LIGHT has been shed on the problem of absenteeism in industry by a report of the General Motors Corporation. Within a few months this corporation will have employed fifty per cent more workers than during any peace year, and the numerical total may reach half a million employees. From so large a group it is possible to get an accurate picture of a cross-section of industry.

Unfortunately, the verdict is not too encouraging from the point of regular attendance. Absenteeism is much greater during wartime than during peacetime, an average of 45,000 man-days being lost every week by General Motors because employees stay away from the job.

Part of this may be explained by physical ill due to greater strain, but some of it must be attributed to the feeling of superiority which high wages confer. Economic pressure has been eased for many workers, with the result that being docked a few dollars now and then for absence holds no terrors. Others, with more money than they ever saw before, cannot help celebrating just after pay day.

Perhaps this aspect finds some confirmation in the report of President C. E. Wilson, of General Motors, that women, although as a whole new to industrial work, stay on the job more conscientiously than do men. There is something in this for men workers to think about. Some of them have been wondering about the position of women in industry after the war. The influx of women into industry has furnished a yardstick for conscientious patriotic effort, and men had better look to their laurels to avoid being outdistanced by the distaff side.

A New Zest For Living

WHEN Longfellow said: "And things are not what they seem," he was a bit ahead of himself. He should have lived until the post-World War II days, when he would have found that his line was exactly correct.

Many things in the post-war era will not be what they seem to be, according to Theodore G. Joslin, public relations director of E. I. du Pont de Nemours and Company, who spoke recently before the Boston Chamber of Commerce-New England Management Sales Conference.

"We will have glass that is unbreakable and glass that will float, wood that won't burn and laminations of plastics and wood that will compete with structural metals," said Mr. Joslin. "Hosiers derived from air, water and coal, a wonder of pre-war days, is but the forerunner of many innovations from the same sources, ranging from shoes that contain no leather and window screen that contains no wire to machinery bearings that contain no metal."

The story is told of a man who said that he never cared to live until the depression began. Then his interest in living suddenly took root because he wanted to see how the depression would turn out. People alive today ought to gain new zest for living not only for the privilege of seeing the end of the war but also the dawn of the new age that will follow this era of darkness.

Why the German Radio Is Now So Mournful

THOSE who have been puzzled over the recent threnodic outpourings of the German radio about the continued reverses in Russia will be interested in the explanation offered by Elmer Davis, director of the Office of War Information.

Davis admits that the funeral tone of these broadcasts is so pronounced that they are open to suspicion, yet he believes the purpose is twofold: to lull the Allied peoples into believing that they need not work hard to win the war, and to stir up the German people so that when the Russian offensive is finally slowed down they will be considerably heartened.

The latter may be in line with the "German through fear" policy, that is, galvanizing the German people into still greater efforts by warning them of the "awful" things that may happen to them if their country is defeated.

Nothing, of course, can be taken for granted from Nazi schemings and their present use of the radio may be regarded as such, but this explanation seems to be about as logical as any. At any rate, it shows realization by the German high command that it is now facing a much tougher job.

When the time comes for the Allies to decide just who will hang Hitler, the Czechs can always say that they saw him first.

The optimist who buys a suit to be delivered after the war should specify an adjustable waist measure.

One Isn't Enough

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Once you were riding a horse and he threw you.
Do you therefore hate all horses?

Once a kitten scratched you?
Are you afraid of all kittens?

You climbed a tree when you were young and fell and broke an arm.
You are more careful now when you climb a tree, but do you hate all trees?

You slipped on a banana peeling and fell.
Have you developed a grudge against all bananas?

How silly, you say.
And yet, there are man-haters and woman-haters of life.

There are men who say they hate women. Such a man was hurt by a woman. He trusted her; she was not trustworthy. He gave his heart to a woman and she threw it away, not kindly but with disdainful laughter. He married a woman and their marriage was a hell on earth. And because of one bitter experience with one woman, he sings a song of hate against all women.

And there are women who hate men. . . . A woman hater's father made her young life a misery. Her brother was weak and worthless. Her lover kept no promises and trampled on her loyalty. She has "learned her lesson" and she warns all women against perfidious men. . . . Or no man loved her, ever, and she despises all men.

There are men and women who hate life because it has not kept the promises they think it made—because the bright glow has faded and the leaping flame has died to a flicker and the happy Valley of Life is a Vale of Tears.

But once is not enough. One man is not all men. One existence is not all life. And why should any man or woman leap so wildly from the particular to the general and how all become a little less than dust? . . . But many a life is wrecked because a small incident is allowed to spread and poison all of living.

Aviation Points To Entirely New Era of Diplomacy

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—Entirely apart from the military significance of the president's trip to North Africa, the transatlantic journey is symbolic of the ending of one era and the beginning of another. It has implications for the future of democratic government and for the establishment of machinery whereby peace can be preserved.

For the airplane which has made thousands of safe trips back and forth across the ocean now carries a president of the United States to confer in person with the head of another government. The incident means that the world is relatively small, that distances no longer furnish an insurmountable barrier for personal communication and that the day of second-hand and indirect diplomacy has been superseded by a day of direct contact.

Who can doubt now that Mr. Roosevelt will feel free to fly to the next peace conference and then back to America quickly to explain what has happened? Who can doubt that in the future when a crisis in world peace occurs an American president will fly abroad to Geneva or The Hague to confer with the parties at interest offering a practical means of mediation? The failures of written diplomacy with its formal language and super-condensed code messages is well known. The opportunity for personal persuasiveness and the give-and-take of personal discussion whereby passions may be cooled and misunderstandings removed is at hand.

Greater Worth in Peace
The airplane has proved its worth in combat. But its greatest chance to help make peace and keep it lies ahead. As long as there are airplanes to carry important personages back and forth, men of first-rate ability in the business and governmental world can travel any distance quickly to help adjust the tangled economic questions that so often are the root of friction leading to war.

Just as the Atlantic is being spanned a dozen times a day by relays of planes carrying cargo or passengers or warriors so the Pacific is being spanned also. In four days American representatives of the armed forces fly back from Australia or to New Zealand or to other combat areas. In about six days or less an envoy can get from Chungking or India to America.

Motors Dependable
What is not generally realized is that the reliable airplane motors of today are doing jobs which never before have been tried and the amount of engine failure is negligible just as the amount of poor navigation is reduced to the minimum.

Little has been revealed about the wonderful achievements of the air transport service which comprises all the private air lines. Little is known of the way the famous Pan-American Clipper planes are carrying important passengers back and forth across the oceans. Military necessity still keeps the details secret but the public can well infer that the progress has been so great that a president of the United States did not hesitate to use the plane to cross the Atlantic.

Final Recognition
The airplane has come into its own in this war not only as a means of combat but as a vehicle of communication and transportation. When the president of the United States decides to use personal and direct conference instead of written messages through couriers or radio to get together with the military and civilian chiefs of our major ally in this war, it means that the airplane has gotten final recognition despite the accidents and failures and the hazards of weather. For on the law of chance, the airplane has fared very well with the risks of weather and man-made errors.

Plainly, the president must have had the best pilots, excellent escort

SHOOT HIM IN THE PANTS, THE COAT AND VEST ARE OURS

Mallon Cites Typical Case Records and Says Rationing System Is Too Clumsy

By PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28—Yes sir, the government rationers are certainly proving daily that a centralized arbitrary government will never do for the United States.

By their inability to divide fairly and efficiently what stocks of non-military fuel oil and other things we have, they are convincing the Americans with bitter experience, that totalitarianism will not work here.

If this necessary war rationing program was, in anyone's mind, an experiment for a post-war managed economy, it has failed.

Take the experience of a small Connecticut medical supplies firm. It is slightly worse, but in all ways similar to the 600 or more letters from farmers, oil dealers, clerks, small business men, boarding house keepers and others, that lie on my desk.

This operator of a necessary business, delivering medical supplies to hospitals and physicians, is only one of four such firms in Connecticut. He occupied a new building last year with a new type central heating plant, using fuel oil, and not suitable for conversion.

He measured everything conscientiously, sent in reports indicating he needed 2,300 gallons of oil this winter, and received an allowance of 430 gallons when the first coupons were handed out in December.

Stove Is Bought
By this time, he had used two-thirds of that amount, and knew he must do something. So he bought one of those three-legged, pot-bellied stoves for $40, the kind that Seam-Roebuck used to sell for $12.

He paid $6 for a mason to make a hole in the chimney, and $10 for pipes, a total of $56, but then he could get no coal.

Finally he found one dealer who would sell coal if he would come for it. His office force got into their station wagon and went with paper bags to get 500 pounds of coal.

The coal dealer refused at first to sell, because the bags were marked by a rival coal company, but, after some negotiation and a half day of effort by the whole staff, they got 500 pounds into the office.

Then the stove wouldn't work. It went out at night and occasionally during the day. An ad in the paper said the army was selling surplus stocks of good stoves, known by the enticing title of "Warm Morning." That was what he wanted, and he located one but the rationing board would not allow its delivery.

Forms Impossible
Forms were furnished to him applying for it. No one in his position could honorably fill out such a form because it did not fit his circumstances and would require untruthful statements.

He explained the circumstances to the board, but an official told him there were only two forms and he would have to fill out one or the other, truthful or not.

Simultaneously, the mail brought a post-card from the rationing board marked:

"Second notice. Call at once and get your coal oil ration coupons."

So did, and was awarded 600

Paul Mallon

gallons more for periods 3, 4, and 5, which would make his total allowance 1,080 gallons as against a consumption of 2,300 gallons last year.

Even so, this was manna from Heaven until the same board wrote him the next day:

"It is necessary for you to return at once all your fuel rationing coupons. Please fill in the following information—total area—total area used for residential purposes—percentage of your total area used for residential purposes—bring this letter with you."

Attached to the notice was a lot of incomprehensible legal verbiage, the substance of which seemed to be that he was applying for a stove and therefore his fuel oil was being cut off.

He is going to hire a lawyer to at least find out where he is. He paid $40 lawyer fees before getting gasoline rationing allowances for his necessary business.

A Farmer's Experience

Or, consider the situation of a Delaware farmer, who says he grows a little wheat and had to go twenty-seven miles to the county seat to sign up for gas, to market it, losing one-half day's work and then had to return again for sugar, although his gas rationing allowance was four gallons a week, which he could use on the side to hunt for help when he didn't have to go to the rationing board.

"They made out the paper themselves," he complains, "but in three or four days they wrote me to come back and give more information as to where my market was. I drove in and told them that if they were so dumb they didn't know where Lincoln, Del., was when it was in sight of their office, I didn't propose to tell them."

"They granted my request to take my wheat to market, but when I went back to get brown sugar to cure my hogs, they said they had word from Washington not to allow it. I demanded to see his papers to that effect, but the pile in his office looked worse than a busted bunch of corn fodder on a windy day."

Buck Passed

The farmer appealed to his representative in Washington, who passed the buck to the state board in Wilmington, which gave him three choices—to use his table sugar, to turn his meat over to any packer who had a surplus, or to buy a commercial preparation.

"I went out and got brown sugar and didn't give up my table sugar either," he says.

"Then, here came this tire stuff. I had six tires, one wheel was out of line. I had it fixed with blowout patches, but he had to give up all over five, so I turned in that one."

"I got twenty cents from the government for it, drove thirty miles turning it in, although it was never flat and worth $4 or $5. Some pig made money out of that tire—and more than twenty cents."

"From the way we had to run to these ration boards and keep them informed, we won't have time to due much farming."

There seems to be some millions of citizens who, in a more or less exasperated way have come to the same conclusions as the Connecticut dealer in medical supplies and the Delaware farmer.

Million Too Many Bureaucrats Now, Robison Charges

By CHARLES P. STEWART

Central Press Columnist

Uncle Sam's approximate 3,000,000 of wartime federal bureaucrats could be thinned out by about 1,000,000, according to Representative John M. Robison, of Kentucky, not only to the tune of an enormous financial saving but as a preliminary to an enormous improvement in the service.

The Kentucky lawyer expressed himself in accompaniment to a congressional investigation, just starting under the chairmanship of Representative Ramspeck, of Georgia, into governmental employment methods. The quiz has not progressed far enough to be very indicative yet. Nevertheless the initial testimony decidedly is down the alley that he refers to.

The regular departmental workers are not the ones criticized. The special agencies' staffs are not the folk under fire. Even the rank-and-file of these members are not so much blamed as their superiors are.

Loaf at Desks

The underlings, it is asserted, are pitchforked wholesale into jobs that do not mean anything to their bosses themselves. Having nothing definite to do, they simply loaf at a multiplicity of desks and clutter up thousands of offices detrimentally to the activities of the few who actually have individual ideas of the duties they would like to be attending to competently. At least, that is the story the Ramspeck committee is listening to from its witnesses.

Congressman Robison tells of a farmer in his home district, from whom the government needed certain crop information. It was easy to get, says Robison, and a single researcher could have obtained it in the course of a few minutes' chat with the agriculturist. Yet in the course of one day, relates the Kentucky legislator, that farmer was flayed in succession, by sixteen different sleuths, asking the same questions. It delayed the farmer. Furthermore, his sixteen separate inquisitors turned in sixteen conflicting reports concerning conclusions drawn from these various chats with him.

Chinese Puzzles

As to questionnaires, everybody is becoming familiar with them, so mid-March tax collection time approaches. You, dear reader, will have been getting your batch of interrogations recently. That they fore-shadow monetary ruin to you does not require stating. But, in addition to that, they're a Chinese puzzle each.

You must be an expert accountant to understand one of them. And expert accountants run into money. They disagree likewise. Little peewees, like me can't afford them. And then, if you hire one, he differs from others. The fact is that treasury authorities differ as to interpretations. To tell the truth, the administration did not want the Ramspeck ventilation. It reveals the bughouse character of executive management.

No Management

Maybe it isn't MIS-management, but there is NO management about it, and it is impossible for it to claim that there is. The bureau cannot be classified except alphabetically ADA-FCC-OWI-FWA-GAO-I-AID-B. That's just a handful of them. Nobody knows, who their respective heads are. They do not know among themselves. Telling them apart is impossible.

The WPB and the OPA notably are on the pan. WPB is alleged to be notably overmanned. If, as per the Ramspeck committee's informants, this were just so infernally expensive, it would not be so serious, but the proposition is that it is positively deleterious to our effort. It's an investigation designed to show not crookedness, but fatheadedness, in the administration.

In general, it has been an unusually respectable war, financially. There should not be any subsequent monetary scandals. It does not look like it now, anyway. Some "war brokers" will be caught, maybe, but not numerously.

Factographs

A "carry-your-own" pocket-sized ration kit, with four tiny compartments, for sugar, coffee, butter, and one egg, has been designed for civilians.

Colloidal graphite, used for lubrication and protection of certain types of tools, will withstand heat that oil cannot endure.

The first United States Marines to land on European soil accompanied Benjamin Franklin to France in 1776.

Two new important uses for graphite are in powder metallurgy and electronics.

More than half the graphite mined in the world goes into foundry uses.

sonal supervisor, said no schools were closed and added that all will be open today unless something unexpected should happen.

Allegany and Fort Hill high schools reported a combined total of 500 absent students, about 300 more than normal. The combined enrollment of the two institutions is about 3,600.

Three school buses failed to arrive at Fort Hill high school but all of them arrived at Allegany. Mexico Farms, Iron's mountain and Hazen road buses were unable to get through to Fort Hill.

School Buses Stalled
State police said two school buses were stalled for about two hours in the snow on the connecting road between U. S. Route 40 at Allegany

Grove and Winchester road. One of the buses was empty and the other carried only a few students, officers said.

Although the ban on pleasure driving does not affect persons motoring to work, many persons left their cars at home and walked or sought bus transportation to offices, stores or plants where they are employed.

The snow came as a complete surprise except to persons working at night who were enroute home in the early morning hours. Late sleepers were particularly surprised on awaking to find streets and buildings covered with snow and more falling rapidly.

Even though the snow was reported heavier east of Cumberland than west, Corp. Thomas Currie, of the state police, said about two feet covered the ground in Oakland, Frostburg, however, reported conditions similar to those in Cumberland.

land, and, if anything, a little less snow.

A drizzling rain was falling there last night and should the weather turn suddenly cold and the temperatures drop below the freezing point, travel and communications would face additional difficulties. Late last night in Cumberland, however, the temperature remained close to forty degrees, safely above the freezing point of thirty-two degrees.

Last year Cumberland's heaviest snow was on March 3 when seven inches fell. In 1941 a total of fourteen inches fell on March 8 and 9, three inches shy of the total recorded here yesterday.

Depth of the snow gave Cumberland residents an unwanted task as Chief of Police Oscar A. Eyerman announced that the law under penalty of fine, requires removal of snow from sidewalks within six hours after precipitation ceases.

Eyerman advised piling the snow along the outside edge of the sidewalk and emphasized that it should not be shoveled on to the street. If that is done, he explained, a snow plow may throw it back on to the sidewalk. In addition, he said, deep snow interferes with parking and an even flow of traffic.

Common Cold Lacks a Speedy Cure But Its Symptoms Can Be Relieved

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.
"What shall I do for my cold, doctor?"
Well, the doctor probably doesn't know any more about it than you do. In fact, when you ask the doctor, he may be suffering just as much from a cold as you are.
In the first place, you can discard the idea that you are going to cure a cold and be perfectly comfortable by any method known to man in five hours, a day, or in fact, five days. This piece of advice is a consummation of man's experiments since he sniffled around in the Egyptian sun near the pyramids. So since we can't cure it, let us see what the disagreeable features of a cold are due to and try reasonably to find out how much relief can be obtained from them.

Inflamed Mucous Membrane
No matter what causes a cold—what particular kind of a germ—the effect is an inflammation of the mucous membrane of the nose, the throat and later on of the bronchial tubes. The mucous membrane of the nose is very thick and spongy and has the possibility of swelling up to five or six times its normal thickness under the inflammation. This gives that feeling of stuffiness in the head.

Raw Feeling in Throat
The inflammation of the mucous membrane of the throat gives the feeling of rawness of the throat and later on when the bronchial tubes are affected, there is a feeling of tightness and rawness in the chest. But this is not all; along with this go the symptoms of a generalized infection—flashes of hot and cold, aches in the muscles, joint pains, loss of appetite, mental depression, the general conclusion that the world is all against you.

Now it is possible to obtain some relief from these symptoms although the treatment does not necessarily shorten the course of the disease. Let us look at some medicinal remedies suggested.
First aspirin, which is probably the favorite and the first-suggested remedy nowadays. Aspirin belongs to the group of the salicylates and according to the best modern pharmacology that I can find, these scientific authors ascribe the following properties to aspirin: it is mildly bactericidal, which means that it has a mild effect on killing off germs of any kind.

It definitely relieves pain, especially of headache and of the joints and of the muscles, by a central action on the nervous system, so it does not make any difference what causes the pain or discomfort, it will be relieved just the same by aspirin. Now all of these things plainly indicate that aspirin deserves its reputation in the treatment of a cold. Checking the symptoms as given above and the effects of aspirin, it will be seen that it relieves the symptoms but it certainly does not cure the cold.

No Help in Sulfa Drugs

In Dr. Wesley W. Spink's book published in 1942 on the sulfa drugs, such as sulfonamide, he has made a list of the diseases for which the drugs are no good. At the head of the list is the common cold. I hope this will be a terrible lesson.

These drugs are to the fore in everyone's imagination now, so the pressure on the doctor to give one for a cold is great. But remember, they all have disagreeable side effects. They make you feel like the dickens for days. That is all right if you have a serious disease like pneumonia, but you don't want to submit yourself to this just for a cold.

Questions and Answers

L. A. C.:—Kindly explain if it is a lack in our diet that causes our nails to split, peel and break.

Answer: It has not been proved that brittle nails are due to any dietary lack. It may be due to infection and it may be due to a vitamin deficiency or circulatory changes. As a matter of fact, our knowledge of the subject is very fragmentary.

The geographical center of continental United States, exclusive of Alaska, is in the eastern part of Smith county, Kansas, latitude 39 degrees 50 minutes N., longitude 98 degrees W.

WHAT ASPIRIN SHALL I BUY?

You can't buy aspirin that can do more for you than St. Joseph Aspirin and you can't buy aspirin safer, surer, faster-acting, St. Joseph Aspirin is the world's largest seller at 10¢ and you get 36 tablets for 20¢, 100 tablets only 35¢. Always demand St. Joseph Aspirin.

Food for thought, Mrs. Housewife—is the fact that the strength and war-time productivity of your family depends on what you serve! Do you know how to balance a day's menu—and each meal—so that everyone gets enough of all the vitamins? Do you know how many different foods and cereals there are with whole wheat and enriched flour content? Do you know that you can buy food economically yet feed your family more wisely than you may now be feeding them at greater cost? Our years of experience as a quality grocer enables us to serve you wisely and well in these war-time days. . . We're only too glad to help and advise you on the most nutritive foods for self-starting breakfasts . . . noon-time lunches and family dinners.

Elmer Bisbing Is

Of Gas Station*Meyersdale Youth Admits
Taking $21.50 from
Cash Register

MEYERSDALE, Pa., Jan. 28—The Esso gas station operated by Russell Weimer on Grant street, was looted last night and $21.50 taken from the cash register. Entrance was gained through the front door with the aid of a skeleton key.

The theft was reported to the police by Weimer, who discovered the robbery before he left early this morning to begin his shift as one of the watchmen at the Sand Patch tunnel of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad.

Bittner rounded up several youths who frequented the gas station, and following a conference in the office of the burgess, Elmer Bisbing, who resides a few doors from the gas station, was held as the perpetrator of the robbery and later confessed. A considerable amount of the money taken was returned by Bisbing, who yesterday afternoon was committed to the Somerset jail to await action of the grand jury. Second Victory Book Campaign Is Being Conducted in Westernport*Japanese Plots
To Alienate U. S.
Negroes Revealed

WESTERNPORT, Jan. 28—The second Victory Book campaign is underway in Westernport, with Mrs. Kenneth C. Pifer as chairman. Bruce high school library is the receiving depot for all books.

Residents of Westernport, who wish to donate books are requested to contact Mrs. Pifer, and the books will be called for.

The campaign is widely advertised at Bruce high school. Pupils have made original posters which are now on display through the building. Students in the commercial department have made book marks bearing the slogan, "Give the kind of books you want to keep." Teachers are urging the pupils to donate books of travel, adventure, mystery and biography.

The students of St. Peter's high school are making plans for a Valentine dance to be held in the high school auditorium February 12.

The charges were conspiracy to cause insubordination, disloyalty, mutiny and refusal of duty in the armed forces, and conspiracy to hinder compliance with the selective service law.

In commenting on the indictment, Biddle said that "attempts by Japanese agents to infiltrate negro groups have been indignantly repudiated by responsible leaders of our negro citizens throughout the country."

The Justice department said that Mingo De Guzman, 42, a Filipino now under sentence for forging money orders, was the actual founder of the Pacific Movement, which at one time claimed 100,000 members. The department said that De Guzman acted under the direction of Satohashi Takahashi, a retired Japanese army officer, and that negroes were promised arms and ammunition against the day "when Japan attacks the west coast."

A major theme of the Pacific Movement, the government said, was to stir up racial prejudice and resistance to the war program by telling the negroes that a Japanese victory would secure their "liberation."

The department said that branches had been established in seventeen cities, principally in the middle west.

The count involving the draft law said that negroes were offered the status of "minister" in the "triumph church of the new age," which was described as a "pseudo-religious adjunct" of the Movement. Members of the Movement were urged to apply for certificates as ministers of the church—including payment of a fee—under the representation, the department said, that such a certificate would exempt them from military service.

The indictment covers only acts alleged to have been committed since Pearl Harbor, and concerns principally meetings held in East St. Louis under the leadership of Butler or Erwin, the Justice department said.

Among the statements cited in the indictment and which the department said were "designed to mislead and corrupt the patriotic, loyal and law-abiding population of colored people of East St. Louis" were these:

"The Japanese are brothers of the negroes, and the negro race will be better off under Japanese rule than under white rule."

"Members of the Pacific Movement of the eastern world should accumulate as many guns and as much ammunition as possible in order to be able to stage an uprising to assist the Japanese when they invade the United States."

"This is a white man's war, and negroes should not participate in it."

The department said that branches had been established in East St. Louis, Mounds and Chicago, Ill.; Cleveland, Shaw and Greenville, Miss.; Tulsa, Muskogee and Boynton, Okla.; Cincinnati and Cleveland, Ohio; Phoenix, Ariz.; Gary and Indiana Harbor, Ind.; Pittsburgh, Philadelphia and Detroit.

Three carloads of the cans were loaded hours later and sent on their way to a detaining plant.

Mayor D. Boone Dawson said that from now on the cans will be picked up on the second Wednesday of each month.

The Census Bureau has received a copy of the death certificate for an 82-year-old woman, on which the physician listed the cause of death as "general debility resulting from old age, plus malnutrition." This, he said, was due to "exclusive disposition, bad teeth, diet largely alcoholic beverages, which gives a feeling of well-being, plus forgetfulness."

Dashiell Hammett Story Comes to the Screen

To readers of mystery stories, and to devotees of mystery movies the name of Dashiell Hammett is no mystery. From his prolific pen have come some of filmdom's most exciting who-done-it—"The Thin Man" series and "The Maltese Falcon" at the time of their release having been responsible for an increase in pulse and blood pressure of moviegoers.

High up among Hammett's best-sellers is "The Glass Key," a mystery charged with suspense and action, and enhanced by an exciting three-cornered romance. Paramount brings it to the screen of the Strand theater today with a strong, star-studded cast headed by Brian Donlevy, Veronica Lake and Alan Ladd, and supported by Bonita Granville, Richard Denning and Joseph Calleia.

From all reports "The Glass Key" rates with the best of the Hammett thrillers. Bringing together again, as it does, Veronica Lake and Alan Ladd, co-stars of "This Gun For Hire" plus the extremely popular Brian Donlevy, it is easy to believe that Hammett followers have another treat in store for them.

Gilbert Has Role In Arabian Nights

Since he was four years old, Billy Gilbert celebrated his birthday anniversary on the twelfth of September, but from now on it will be the twelfth of January.

Until recently, when he received his birth certificate from the State of Kentucky, the film comedian believed he had been born backstage in the old Louisville Opera House. On September 12, 1894, but the official record of birth, obtained after nearly a year of investigation, state that he was actually born January 12, 1894.

Gilbert, when the birth certificate was delivered to him during the making of "Walter Wanger's Arabian Nights" at Universal, was dumfounded. The famous comedian, who has an important role in the Technicolor production now at the Liberty theater, said, "I can't explain it. My mother, who lives in San Francisco, told me when I was a youngster that September 12 was the date."

Young and Day Star in Picture

Robert Young and Laraine Day, two of Hollywood's most appealing players, are featured in "Journey for Margaret," which opened yesterday at the Maryland theater.

Following his successes in "Joe Smith, American" and "H. M. Pulham, Esq.," Young adds another triumph to his long list of screen accomplishments. As John Davis, war correspondent, he has a part tailor-made to his talents. Miss Day, rapidly becoming one of Hollywood's most-in-demand young actresses, makes another step towards stardom as Nora, faithful wife of John.

The story, taken from William L. White's best-selling book of the same title, tells of the adventures of Davis while on a special assignment in bomb-blasted London.

Dancer's First Film Brings Talking Debut

Margie Hart, queen of American burlesque, has been on the stage for seven years, but she speaks her first words before an audience in "Lure of the Islands," in which she will be seen as the star at the Embassy theater now.

During her career before the footlights, Margie has neither said a word nor sung a note, depending solely on her own personality and magnetism as she went through her dance specialty. That this must have had a potent effect on theater audiences is indicated by the fact that she has for some time been the highest paid performer in burlesque.

But in her first picture Margie is not only voluble as the half-caste South Seas girl who is the heroine of the story, but she sings a haunting song of the islands, bearing the same title as the picture. In addition, she performs a modified hula dance that is said to be a model of undulating grace.

"Boston Blackie" Opens at Garden

"Confessions of Boston Blackie," with Harriet Hilliard and Chester Morris, opens today at the Garden theater. A mystery picture having to do with Blackie's search for stolen treasure 2,000 years old, this is one of the best of the series. George E. Stone and Richard Lane are included in the cast.

A Western, "Overland to Deadwood," is the second feature on the Garden's program today. Charles Starrett and Russell Hayden are starred, and are ably supported by Leslie Brooks and Cliff Edwards.

Panama is the youngest of the New World republics.

Many old age assistance recipients are exchanging their monthly grants from the state for jobs, decreases in this form of aid in a number of states indicated today, according to the American Public Welfare Association.

More than a billion wood pencils are manufactured every year in the United States.

Allegany and Fort Hill Tangle Here Tonight

West Side Crew Favored To Win Intra-City Tilt

Valley Conference Lead at Stake in Romney-Moore-Field Game

The Western Maryland Inter-scholastic League race will reach the half-way point tonight and in the feature clash of the three-game loop program, Coach Walter "Bill" Bowers' Allegany High Campers will tangle with the Fort Hill High Sentinels in an intra-city affair at 8 o'clock on the Campobello court.

Intra-city tussles, as a rule, are close and hard-fought battles and the Alleganyans, although favored to open their bid for city honors with a victory, draw a stiff assignment in the in-and-out Hilltoppers.

The West Siders, holding first place in the WMI chase with four straight victories, will be playing their second top-ranking foe in four days. Tuesday night, the Bowersmen took over sole possession of the No. 1 slot in the league by defeating Beall, of Frostburg, which had won the first three WMI encounters.

Campers on Rampage
Allegany will be striving to nail the tenth straight triumph since it bowed to Ferndale, of Johnstown, Pa., and its twelfth in thirteen starts this season. Fort Hill, with a season record of seven triumphs and five losses, sports a .500 average in the league with two wins and as many reverses.

If tonight's tussle develops into anything like the recent LaSalle-Fort Hill intra-city battle, Allegany will be in for a busy evening. The Explorers had been favored to topple the Scarlet and White but were hard-pressed to win by a single point.

The engagement will be handled by Van Roby and Cliff Pearer and will follow a preliminary at 7 o'clock between the Fort Hill Reserves and the Allegany reserves.

In the other WMI games tonight, Beall will be favored to defeat Barton at Frostburg and Central shouldn't have any trouble with Bruce, of Westernport, at Lonaconing.

Central has divided in four loop games while Bruce has gone down to defeat in all twelve of its contests this season. Beall, holding the runnerup position in the league, will be striving for its fourth WMI win in five starts.

Conference Leaders Clash
Five other contests are on tonight's district program. Thomas will play at Bayard, Romney at Moorefield and Petersburg at Franklin in Potomac Valley Conference games. Fort Ashby will travel to Piedmont and Belington will invade Parsons.

The conference leadership will be at stake at Moorefield, Coach Fred "Jack" Clark's Moorefield Yellow Jackets have won three straight games and are unbeaten in four starts this season. Romney, with four conference triumphs, lost its first game of the campaign to LaSalle Wednesday night.

The tilts at Bayard, Piedmont and Parsons will be return clashes. Thomas holds a 42-23 verdict over Bayard, Piedmont thumped Fort Ashby 36-20 in the first meeting and Belington blasted Parsons 36-19 earlier in the season.

Only two games are slated tomorrow night. Ridgely will travel to Keyser and Petersburg will go to Franklin for Potomac Valley Conference tests.

LaSalle Wallops Frostburg Jayvees

The LaSalle high Explorers added another victim to their long list last night on SS. Peter and Paul floor by walloping the Frostburg State Teacher Jayvees 42 to 19.

Dropping goals in with abandon the Explorers piled up a 13 to 2 margin at the first quarter and increased their lead to 31 to 3 at the half. At this point Coach Slocum took out his regulars and the subs finished the game.

Morrissey and Stakem led the LaSalle attack with nine and eight points respectively while Hunt and Geatz made six each. Gunning made two goals in a substitute role and the other subs made three goals between them. The Teachers could not make headway against the regular Explorers team and fared little better with the subs.

Oglebay and Blank scored two goals each for the losers but other Jayvees could not garner more than one goal. Cliff Pearer refereed the tussle. The lineup:

Durocher Will Aid West Point Team

WEST POINT, Jan. 28. (P)—Leo Durocher, manager of the Brooklyn Dodgers, today was named advisory baseball coach for five weeks at the U. S. Military Academy by Col. Lawrence (Biff) Jones, graduate manager of athletics.

Durocher will act as advisor to Lieut. Walter Amen during the month of March and the first week of April, at which time the Dodgers will be in training at nearby Bear Mountain and, in bad weather, at the army field house.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 28. (P)—It now seems clear why the Boston Braves turned loose those two ancient baseball mariners, Johnny Cooney and Paul Waner. They wanted to make room for some young fellows, such as Lefty Gomez.

Senior Gomez is only 32, at that, although you have been reading about him so long you might have the idea he was pitching during the Boxer rebellion. That's partly due to the fact he was with the Yankees so long. And the Yankees, because of their excellence, got more publicity than the other clubs.

But an even more pertinent reason is Senior Gomez himself. The slender southpaw always has had the happy faculty of leaving a quotable trail of wisecracks in his wake. In other words, he is very, very funny, and not because he makes any obvious effort to be funny.

Rare Sense of Humor

He just has one of those rare senses of humor which prevent their owners from taking anything too seriously. Particularly themselves. And it is this ability to poke fun at himself and otherwise enliven a game which too many of the chatters consider with ponderous, director's room dignity that makes him one of our favorite ball players.

He has the nickname "Goofy," derived possibly from some of his witty sayings and boyish antics. As a matter of fact, we've always found him one of the most coherent of ball players, with a modulated grunt when you address the Senior.

A dugout rover instead of a squatter, Gomez is all over the place, interested in everybody and everything. Particularly things beyond the rim of baseball, which may account for his almost childish fascination by the sight of an airplane. He was the original airplane-spotter and undoubtedly his rotating noggin as he followed the sky trail of a big mechanical bird suggested the first revolving gun turret.

But most of all he is interested in his hitting, which, in his case, is practically beyond the rim of baseball. He'll admit he can't hit an elephant with a paddle, and one of the still unsolved mysteries of the sport is how he happened to get four hits in one game last summer.

We still can see his air of utter frustration blended with speechless rage when Lee Grissom fanned him in an exhibition game at Tampa a couple of years ago. Grissom, no Ted Williams himself, and Gomez had agreed to serve up soft ones to each other when they came to bat. Grissom threw three strikes past Lefty so fast the Senior was swinging at the echo.

Good Partner for Stengel

One thing about it, no matter what kind of a ball team the Braves will have this year they will have the best song and dance act in the game in Manager Casey Stengel and Gomez. Stengel himself is straight, place and show when it comes to dry wit, and teamed with his new pitcher he will be able to wow the fans.

Just what the Braves will do without Johnny Murphy is a question, and it really looks like they slipped up there, as buying Gomez without Murphy is like buying a pair of pants without belt or suspenders. That is, Gomez needs somebody to hold him up in the late innings, and Murphy, as the Yankee relief pitcher, did just that.

At any rate, New York lost a smart, likeable ball player who may do better at Boston than a lot of people might think.

And, the way the baseball situation is right now, he may be on another pennant winner. Even the Phils rate a chance this year.

Parsons Cagers Defeat Keyser

KEYSER, W. Va., Jan. 28.—Parsons high school defeated Keyser high here Wednesday night by a 23 to 25 score with Bennett tossing six field goals for the winners. Evans sank four twin-pointers and one of three fouls for Parsons. Shalla made four goals and three fouls for Parsons. Shalla made four goals and three of six fouls for the losers. Van Roby refereed.

The War Future of Sport

It strikes us that too many words have been written, too many reasons have been given, concerning the need importance of sport through the remainder of the war period on ahead.

I have never believed that sport needs any such defending. It is a big part of American life—the American way. It can stand on its own. There are times when one can "protect too much."

There is no such thing as a "must sport." There can be no "must" except winning the war. It is inconceivable that any governing body can decide that the best way to win the war is to abolish sport.

No such drastic move has been made in England, Germany, Australia or Japan. I don't know about Russia or Italy.

There are just three reasons why sport will be continued—
1. The majority of the people want it. 1942, supposed to be a flop year, was one of sport's biggest years.

2. It is something needed in the way of physical fitness, where to know any decisive result it must be based largely upon the competitive side.

3. In a minor way it helps in raising war funds. Under proper direction it could do a much bigger job along this line.

About Racing

There is just one reason or excuse, for example, for racing. It has little to do with any morale making, improving the breed, or helping out in taxes.

The main answer is that many hundreds of thousands, even millions, like racing and want racing, and until it interferes with any war effort there is no reason why it shouldn't be carried on.

We can't be that much wicker than England, Australia, Germany or Japan.

People, one way or another, are going to gamble and trying to stop them is a much rougher job than 8 old Canute knew, in attempting to sweep back the tides with a broom.

Racing doesn't need any fake excuses for its existence. It is merely part of an outlet that helps much more than it hurts.

Baseball and Football

The same is true of baseball and football. I have never felt these games, an even bigger part of American life and the American way, have needed so many voluble defenders.

Both games have written their own answers. It is only natural they can't be used in any form of conflict with any war interest. They should go along and do the best they can with what they have left.

They need no apologies for existence. The War Department and the draft boards and the Man-Power commission have the names of all connected with the two sports and know where all concerned will be able to do the greater good.

Those left should carry on the Ball Players Can Secure Pay Raises

Treasury To Decide If Player Shows "Merit or Service"

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28. (P)—The way opened today for baseball players—except the top-paid man on each club—to put in the annual bid for a salary raise without regard for government pay ceilings.

The top-paid man can get a raise too—if he can convince not only the owners but the treasury's Bureau of Internal Revenue that he is entitled to it on the basis of merit or service.

That was the effect of a ruling on baseball salaries by the bureau which has jurisdiction over all pay in excess of $5,000 a year, and that under $5,000 paid to unorganized executive, administrative or professional persons.

The bureau directed that clubs must file with it a schedule of the salaries paid last year. The range from the lowest to the highest will be accepted as the club's "established salary schedule."

Any man below the top figure can be raised to that figure "for merit or service" without prior permission from the bureau.

Since that covers all but a handful of ball players, the usual individual bargaining for a higher salary contract is in order.

Joe DiMaggio, who got $42,000 from the New York Yankees last year and was the highest paid player in baseball, and the top-paid men on other clubs can also ask a raise, if they want to. But whatever agreements they may reach with the management must be submitted to the bureau.

If the bureau finds there is a basis in "merit or service" for an increase, it will approve. Otherwise, the raise agreed to by the owners will be just a long fly-out.

Wilson Is Tough, Louis Warns

"And don't let anybody kid you about Robinson having an easy time that night," he informed Mike. "Ray's won 44 fights in a row up to now, and Wilson will be the toughest of 'em all."

Loyola College Leads State Cage Scoring Scramble

Tommy Mont Is Sixth in Individual Scoring Race

By FRED STABLEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

Loyola College of Baltimore took the lead in the Free State collegiate individual scoring scramble during the past week, annexing the first two positions and placing four men among the first ten.

Barney Goldberg grabbed the No. 1 spot with 147 points in thirteen games. His only close competitor was Franny Bock, his teammate, just ten points behind.

Other Loyola players to make the top ten were Paul Feeley and Eugene O'Connor, in seventh and eighth places respectively, while a fifth Greyhound player, Paul Nuss, missed the ten by one point.

Paul Oberhaus, of U. of Baltimore, who last week shared the top rung with Goldberg at 104 points, slipped to third while his team was idle.

In average production per game, however, Oberhaus still held a comfortable lead. He rolled in his 104 points in just six trips to the hardwood, for an average of better than 17, while Goldberg's average over the thirteen game route was only 11.

Newcomers to the inner circle were Feely and Leg Lodge of Western Maryland, the latter in ninth position, while Nuss and Ed Mogowski, of Western Maryland, lost the spots they held last week.

Travis, of Maryland, continued to lead the free throw artists with 25 successful conversions.

State individual scoring standings:

Player and Team	Games	G	T	TP
Goldberg, Loyola	13	62	19	147
Bock, Loyola	13	60	17	137

Dodgers Inspect Training Site Near West Point

Army Will Allow Use of Field House for Indoor Work

By JUDSON BAILEY

WEST POINT, N. Y., Jan. 28. (AP)—Branch Rickey, descendant of a long line of explorers, led an expedition of newspapermen and Brooklyn Dodgers officials into this capital of the army today and was informed, to the surprise of the newspapermen, at least, that Leo Durocher had been appointed advisory coach of the army baseball team.

The announcement also said that in the event Durocher is called for service by his draft board the new officer in charge of baseball, Lieut. Paul Amen, formerly a star athlete at the University of Nebraska, immediately would take over.

Amen Succeeded French

Lieut. Amen succeeded Walter French, last year's baseball coach who now is an officer in the army air corps.

The New York newspapermen and Dodger officials came up the Hudson river today to look over the Brooklyn baseball club's spring training site at Bear Mountain, five miles away, and the field house here where the Dodgers will work out in inclement weather.

There was a lot of fun at Bear Mountain, a famous ski resort, as Branch Rickey was photographed on skis.

The expedition set out from New York this morning aboard the Weekawken ferry with Mel Jones, the new traveling secretary of the Dodgers, looking longingly at a map and a sheaf of directions.

After reaching this outpost on the Hudson river the boys got down to business and were told among other things that the Dodgers were granted use of the West Point field house for three hours each day, or any day that the weather was not suitable for outside practice, and that this permission was subject to change without notice.

Will Restrict Dodgers

"This is the capital of the army," said Captain Donald Thurman, "and we are fully aware of the fact we are as much responsible to the war effort as any army unit anywhere in the world. For that reason we must make it clear now that we are making available the facilities of West Point to the Dodgers only to the extent that they would not be used by the Cadets and that if the commandant of Cadets at any time says that he needs the field house for Cadet training during the hours allotted to the Dodgers this permission will be immediately revoked."

Captain Thurman said that the Dodgers would be restricted in their movements on the post while here as are any other civilians.

Hubbell Does Not Fear Cold Weather

Says Hurlers Will Have Early Season Edge on Hitters

By SCHUYLER ALLMAN

OKLAHOMA CITY, Jan. 28. (AP)—Carl Hubbell, the well-known New York Giants meat chiller, is ready to be punched for another baseball season undaunted by the perils of training in frosty latitudes.

The sixteenth contract which the Giants have mailed him came by the post today, but the club policy keeps even an old-timer like Hubbell from saying whether he accepts or holds out.

However, Hubbell was full of talk about the new season, and since he never has held out anything worse than his bat it takes no sleuth to figure he'll be on hand to begin training March 15.

What about trying to get his weather-beaten wing into shape on the snow-bound coast of Lakewood, N. J., where the Giants will train to keep some of the load off over-worked transportation?

"Why," said Hubbell, "it won't make any difference. In the last few seasons I haven't got started until hot weather anyway."

This new business of locating training camps up north far from the luxuries of tropical scenery is going to give pitchers an early-season edge over batters, Hubbell believes.

While the hitters are out hitting in the blizzards, the pitchers will be pitching in a nice warm field-house and loosening the kinks of the winter layoff.

Hubbell has spent most of his time at his country place, taking care of his horses and a few head of cattle. Next month he will begin warming up with a little gym work.

One of the game's greatest south-paws, Hub has been good for 249 Giant victories in fifteen seasons, including eleven only last year.

Sport Paintings in Museum Show

NEW YORK, Jan. 26. (AP)—Oil paintings don't rate mention on the sport pages but the annual exhibition of contemporary American artists at the Metropolitan Museum of Art is an exception. A number of interesting sports paintings adorn the galleries in the "Artists for Victory" show.

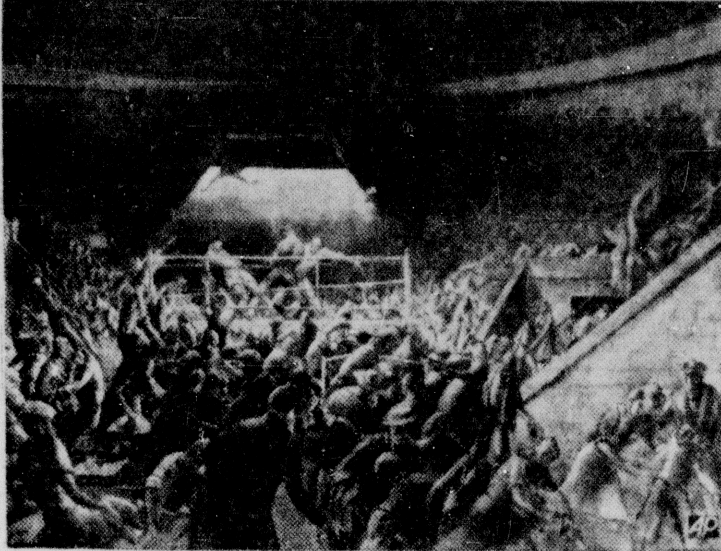

It would not be true to say that sport runs off with the show for in view of the popularity of athletic activities, there is a sad lack of sporting art. For instance, the nation's "varsity art team" has neglected football and horse racing entirely.

One of the highlights of the few sports paintings in the exhibit of 1,418 masterpieces, is the one on baseball. The lone representative of America's national game does not show a player, a bat, a ball or a diamond.

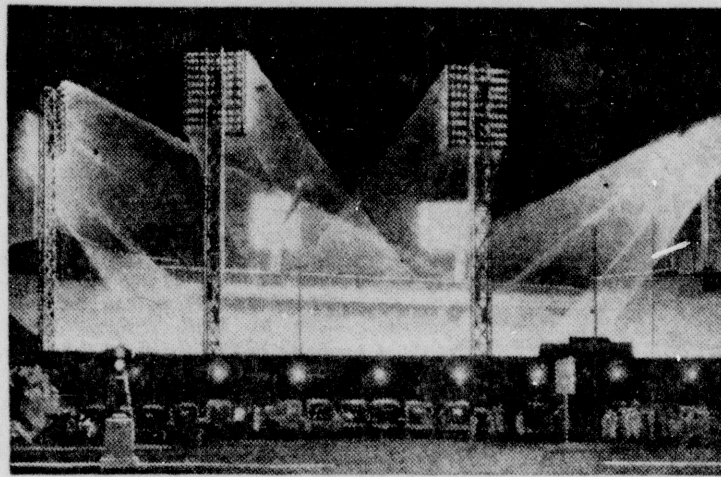

Artist Roy Hilton of Pittsburgh, Pa., calls his work "Night Game." It is a striking canvas of Forbes Field, done in tremendous contrasts of black and white—the black of night and the white of the floodlights. It was painted outside the park while a game was in progress.

Heavyweight champion Joe Louis is the only athlete who appears in a painting—"The End of the Fight." The ring is the center point and the attention of the crowd is centered on the boxers. Artist Andrea Pietro Zeraga of Washington, D. C., has skillfully portrayed the scene after a knockout punch.

Other sport paintings have skating, marbles, fishing, sledding, polo and shadow boxing for their background with the ice activity being represented on the most canvases.

Long Underwear Ordered for Cards

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 18. (AP)—The old "grapefruit circuit" of balmy spring training days will be called "the long underwear league," if Harrison, J. Weaver of the World Champion Cardinals has his way.

The veteran trainer, who mixes hard-headed facts with his pet superstitions, believes the pennant-winning teams this year will be those suffering the fewest cases of illness while conditioning North of the Eastman-Landis line.

He isn't trying to frighten players with visions of oxygen tents, men in white and sulphur drugs, but he thinks that colds and similar ailments will be a training problem.

And, as far as "Doc" Weaver is concerned, the best safe-guard is a lot of long underwear, ankle length. "I have notified Butch Yankman (Cardinal property man) to lay in a large supply," he said today. "I wish we could make it mandatory that the players wear such underwear. I don't care what color they are. They can be red or pink or baby blue, just so they're long and heavy."

Manager Billy Southworth has sent letters to all his men, telling them to get their legs into condition before reporting to the Cardinals' spring camp in Cairo, Ill., March 15.

Southworth plans two workouts a day and he believes the practice sessions can be longer because there won't be any hot sun to contribute to weariness of the athletes.

Joe Louis's Pupils Lose Seven Bouts

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 28. (AP)—Boxing Teacher Joe Louis insists he's proud of his Port Riley Army pupils, although they won only one of eight bouts last night.

Sergeant Louis was in the corner with each of his fighters, and the series of defeats didn't appear to embarrass the world's heavyweight champion in the least.

He did seem a bit more cheerful, though, when Fort Riley's Joe Producers, 160, drew a terrific right from the pupils of his weariness and floored Ray Spurlock for the count in the third round.

Interviewed as he was greeted in Baltimore by Daniel F. McMullen, Maryland American Legion commander, Roane Waring, national Legion commander, told a reporter that President Roosevelt's flight to North Africa was a "courageous gesture."

Waring made the statement as he began his official visit to the Maryland Legion and said that speculation as to why the "Russians and Chinese" did not attend the Casablanca conference was "unfortunate."

Such a debate, he said, has a tendency to cause suspicion in the public mind that all is not going well among the United Nations. "There is no foundation to such speculation," Waring asserted.

of humanity under the guise of helping working men and women. "But they are organized racketeers and aliens," he added.

Rep. Randolph was greeted with a burst of applause when he proposed an act of Congress which would provide that any alien coming into this country should within three months announce his intentions of becoming a citizen. And at the end of six years if he had not become a citizen, he should be shipped back from where he came.

"We American are to blame for coddling these aliens and permitting them to gain a foothold here," he said.

Concluding his talk, as he hurried to catch a train back to Washington, Rep. Randolph told his audience that he doesn't like forms and questionnaires. He suggested that the people keep "ding-donging" Washington and it wouldn't take long to stop most of them.

Cites Executive Orders Randolph also urged that people take more interest in their government and the American system. He reminded the audience that in the past year 500 executive orders have come out of Washington as laws. Again he was greeted by applause when he proposed that the practice of making laws be returned to Congress where it rightfully belongs.

"America is the citadel of courage and Christianity as well as the arsenal of democracy," the speaker concluded. "And it is the task of this association's as the Y.M.C.A. in any community, to spread the gospel of courage and Christianity and democracy to all mankind."

Featured by vocal selections by the Fort Hill high school choir, directed by Miss Dorothy Seebare, and by a vocal solo by Miss Rosalee Williams of Allegany high school, the young people had an important part in the program.

Members of the Hi-Y clubs of the two local high schools held an induction ceremony by candlelight, which served to exemplify the work of this organization which provides the link between the Y.M.C.A. and the schools.

John A. Ledlie, associate secretary of the Central Atlantic Area, Newark, N. J., John J. Robinson, president, and Everett R. Johnson, secretary of Central Y.M.C.A., were also speakers. Mayor Thomas F. Conlon delivered an address of welcome while Dr. Albert C. Cook, chairman of arrangements, was toastmaster.

Members of the staff of the Y.M.C.A. were presented as were members of the board of directors. Robinson and Johnson made reports on the past year and outlined plans for the year to come.

At the luncheon party in the officers' mess hall were Harry L. Hopkins, chairman of the Anglo-American munitions assignment board; Rear Admiral Ross T. Mc-Intire, surgeon general of the navy and Mr. Roosevelt's personal physician; and Captain John L. McCrea, presidential naval aide.

The White House said the dispatch was signed by Capt. George E. Durno of the Army Air Corps, a former White House correspondent (for International News Service).

United States stocks of graphite were restricted by rationing as early as 1939.

AND THEY SAVE US, TOO
BRIDGE PLAYERS have a great way of seeking consolation by telling friends how their partners have wrecked them. How many make a practice of telling how their partners have saved them from disasters? If you can think of one, you should nominate him for the Hall of Fame, or something else very special, as he will be the first of his kind.

South nearly fell off his chair when North passed that bid of 3-Diamonds. He meant it as an ace-throwing cue-bid, but his partner thought he was trying to show a hand made up of five spades and four cards each in the red suits. Even at that, perhaps North should have shifted to 3-Spades, but he gave as his reason for not doing so the fact that he was sure South would then have gone to 4-Spades, as he admitted he would have.

It turned out that 4-Spades would have been defeated definitely, probably two tricks, whereas the 3-Diamonds got made, with the loss of only two tricks in each minor. North's pass of the 3-Diamonds really saved South from being set. Nobody could call it a good and sound call, but it resulted in the pair winning the rubber, as the next deal produced just enough more points to make a game with the partial score.

But do you believe South is going around telling how North saved his bacon? If so, you have another guess coming.

SYNOPSIS
KAY STEVENS, personable young woman, president of McClure's department store in New York, feels her life strongly attracted to JONATHAN (JAKE) KERR, talented pianist, who has refused all professional offers. Kay has been very friendly with
DAVID RANING, Jr., 35-year-old president of the company, since she first started to work there. Her best friend in the city is her cousin,
BRIANETTA PAGE, who lives in Greenwich Village.

CHAPTER SIX
"HANG DAVID, whoever he is,
and come on out with me," Jake said, pressing her arm tightly.
Tony's party was turning out better than Kay had expected. She felt her weakening.

"I'll tell David you had a headache," Het said, not looking at Kay. "And that you didn't want a lot of fuss and explanations, so you slipped out alone."

"An unlikely story," Kay said, but allowed herself to be led to the back door.

"Don't worry about David. I'll pacify him," Het assured Kay as she said goodbye.

"Why all this fuss about David,"
Jake wanted to know as he hailed a taxi.

"David's my boss. I don't like to be rude."

"Oh," Jake said with relief. He helped her into the taxi. "Any preferences about where we go?"

"Any place that's reasonably quiet," Kay said, as she settled herself comfortably in a corner of the taxi. She didn't feel a bit tired now.

"I have a favorite spot," he said.
"It has music, but it's all toned down. And it's usually deserted after dinner."

"Music means we'll probably dance," Kay thought. "We never have. I don't know if I want to. It will be easier if I don't have that to remember." But still she felt a sense of sweet, troubled anticipation.

By the time they each had smoked a cigarette they were there.
The way the driver thanked Jake.
Kay knew the tip had been too large. They found a table against the wall. Kay liked the place. A small room, the walls all hung with some soft gray material, the lights rosy and dim, the music selective. She caught a glimpse of herself in a mirror and saw that the kind lights had brought some color back to her cheeks.

"Our first meeting in weeks, this calls for a celebration," Jake said, his eyes shining. "Let's have champagne."

Kay nodded her head. They didn't dance until after they had their first glass. Then the orchestra began to play a rumba and Jake said,
"Come on." She had often wondered what kind of a dancer Jake would be. Good, she imagined, with his natural sense of rhythm. She loved to dance. There weren't many people on the floor, just enough to

City, County Residents Dig Out of Deep Snow

Transportation Is Slowed by Heaviest Fall since 1927; One Accident Reported; Schools Hit

Cumberland and Allegany county residents were busy last night digging out from this section's heaviest snow since 1927, a task that promised to be a huge one and last for possibly several days.

Snow began falling shortly before midnight Wednesday and fell unrelentingly until 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon when it stopped abruptly. Leadens skies continued to prevail, however, as additional precipitation threatened.

Public transportation facilities were slowed considerably but all scheduled trains and buses arrived in the city although buses generally were operating up to thirty minutes late.

Communications Not Disturbed. Communication lines to and from the city, however, were not disturbed by the unexpected snowfall that held most of Maryland and surrounding states in its grasp.

Even though Cumberland was experiencing its heaviest snow in fifteen years, this section escaped much of the trouble that developed east of here where the flaky precipitation seemed heaviest.

Coming on top of a nine-inch snow that fell here Tuesday, the additional eight inches measured yesterday increased the total depth to sixteen inches, the greatest for a seventy-two hour period since 1927.

Although highway travel, already reduced considerably by the pleasure driving ban, was lowered to a minimum by the foot-and-a-half of snow, a state roads commission official said last night that workmen mowing snowplows in Allegany and Garrett counties are "doing everything that is humanly possible to keep the roads open."

Forty plows and eighty men were at work in the two counties again yesterday after just completing clearing Tuesday's snowfall from the highways Wednesday afternoon.

The roads commission reported one casualty in its operations when Lawrence O'Brien, 59, 924 Glenwood street, suffered a fracture of his right leg above the knee when he was run over by a state roads truck.

Falls Over Tailgate. O'Brien, a roads commission employee said, fell over the tailgate of a truck as the vehicle started to back toward a cinder pile, near Lonaconing, at 8:45 a. m. A wheel of the truck passed over his leg. He was brought to Allegany hospital for treatment.

Despite the heavy snow, all state roads were open late last night, but state roads employees said motorists were advised to use chains. State police reiterated the statement.

In Cumberland, Edgar D. Reynolds, street commissioner, said the situation is "terrible." Three plows had been in operation and thirty men working since early yesterday morning and Reynolds said they would work through the night and all day today before the streets are cleared. According to plans, he said, Baltimore street will be cleared after midnight when snow will be hauled away.

City street employees were still busy cleaning up Tuesday's snow when the new fall started, Reynolds explained, but shifted their jobs to keeping streets open.

Buses Are Late. The Blue Ridge Transportation Company reported its westbound buses arriving in Cumberland about ten minutes later than those traveling to Baltimore and Washington attesting to the reported severity of the snowstorm east of here. East-bound buses were about twenty minutes behind schedule.

L. and A. buses were operating a half hour behind schedules and a company employee said last night that snow on McMullen highway toward Keyser was deeper than in the city. The roads, he said, were rough and were still somewhat covered by snow.

Both bus lines reported a let-up in passenger traffic but an L. and A. employee said it remained above normal.

The Baltimore and Ohio railroad reported its passenger trains, both east and westbound, arriving here on time and one employee said trains had been operating within fifteen minutes of schedule all day.

Attendance at schools in the county decreased sharply over the previous day, but Arthur G. Ramey, superintendent, said that the situation was not as bad as it appeared.

Local Merchants May Have To Help Harvest 1943 Crops. Dr. Thomas B. Symons believes that such cities as Cumberland and Hagerstown in Maryland will be forced to close stores and shops to supply farmers with sufficient labor to harvest 1943 crops.

The dean of the University of Maryland Agriculture School and head of the state extension service, told the American Women's Voluntary Services Farm rally that Maryland farmers are losing ten men to industry to every farm hand being drafted.

Dr. Symons added that the Maryland draft boards have given the matter of drafting farm labor "sympathetic treatment" but said the problem remains serious.

GERMAN REFUGEE — Leo Lania, (above) one of pre-Hitler Germany's leading journalists, will explain the Joint Distribution Committee, major American agency for aid to Jews overseas, tonight at 7:30 o'clock in Bier Chayim temple. Lania went into voluntary exile in 1933 and was a staff member of the French Propaganda Bureau before the fall of France. After Germany invaded Paris he escaped to America. Tonight's meeting will be in the nature of a forum.

Board Three Lists 33 Who Will Take Army Tests Soon

Will Be Inducted into Service in Baltimore Early in February

Local Draft Board No. 3 yesterday released a list of thirty-three men who have been notified they will be inducted into military service early next month. All of them are "A" type registrants and will be inducted into the army, navy or marine corps under the new setup announced recently, according to Alvin E. Yaste, chief board clerk.

Those called are George C. Loar, Allegany Grove; Juley F. Nadelrod, RFD No. 5, this city; Neal T. Arthur, Beloit, Wis.; James R. January, Parsons, Kansas; James H. Loar, Mt. Savage; Arthur F. Shane Says Sleeman Is Interested in Work or Fight Bill. ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 28 (AP)—Delegate Joseph F. Shane (D-Talbot) declared today he had found support among some Western Maryland lawmakers for the "work or fight" bill he proposes to introduce in the house.

Shane said specifically he had been approached by Delegate Jonathan Sleeman, Frostburg Republican, who expressed agreement with the terms of the tentative proposal.

Shane announced several days ago that members of the assembly from the Eastern Shore had agreed to introduce a bill under terms of which any able-bodied man refusing employment would be jailed.

Offers New Plan To Pay Md. Guard. ANNAPOLIS, Md., Jan. 28 (AP)—Discussion over the proposed $700,000 to be allocated for maintenance of the state guard detail to protect bridges took a new turn today when Sen. Joseph A. Wilmer (R-Charles) suggested the proposed cuts in the state income tax be made smaller and the guards paid out of surplus funds.

He suggested, in a Finance committee hearing, that the income tax be cut only one-fourth instead of a third as Governor O'Connor proposed, in his budget message. The ensuing surplus would pay for the guard detail with a slight cushion fund left over, he declared.

EXTRAVAGANCE, GOVERNMENTAL RED TAPE AND LABOR STRIKES ARE DENOUNCED BY RANDOLPH

Stressing the point that both parents and children must be taught the significance of treatment and must follow instructions regarding treatment, Miss Vivian Lambert, executive secretary of the Allegany County League for Crippled Children, illustrates and substantiates this statement by mentioning a few specific cases in her annual report to the board of directors.

The first case is that of a boy now 18 years of age.

In childhood he was stricken with infantile paralysis and first came to the attention of the league in 1934. Both legs were partially paralyzed, but he was able to walk with the support of braces which were supplied by the league.

He reported regularly to the clinics and made several trips to the Children's Hospital school in Baltimore where a series of operations were performed. In time he was able to discard his brace and walk with only a slight limp.

During this treatment period his schooling was kept up to date by home-teaching, while in the hospital and special transportation to school when he reached the stage where he could get about without assistance.

The result: A slightly disabled young person at the age of seventeen entering pre-medical college to study to be a doctor. He is now a sophomore and doing well in his studies. His disability is of no great handicap to him.

Miss Lambert also told of the case of a little girl who suffered a more mild attack of infantile paralysis at the same time.

Her treatment was all arranged without need for the child to have hospital care. She wore a brace for five years, received physical therapy treatment regularly and, of course, reported to the clinics three times each year. Because special transportation facilities were made available by the department of education, the child and her parents cooperated 100 per cent in carrying out instructions as to the home care of the child and her studies.

She completed her high school course at the age of 16 and subsequently completed a business course and is now holding a very good position.

One fine expression of appreciation of past services of the league was made in the form of a gift of five water colors which now grace the walls of the second floor.

According to Miss Henrietta Schwarzenbach, president, these pictures were painted by William Sheppard Sparks, of LaVale, and presented to the league in appreciation of the attention given his son, Billy.

Billy, now a graduate of Allegany high school, has been completely cured of tuberculosis of the spine.

He is now pursuing a successful course as an airplane model builder and at present is stationed at Langley Field, Va.

This case is another fine example of the things that are being done by the league for the children of this community.

Thirty Are Examined At Chest Clinic Here. Thirty adults and children were examined yesterday at the regular monthly chest clinic in the basement of the city hall.

Dr. Isadore Lyon, of Baltimore, was the clinician. Assisting were Miss Grace Hardman and Mrs. Isabelle Laughlin, public health nurses.

Handkerchiefs on Door Knobs Will Signalize Contributors of Books

600 Girl and Boy Scouts To Start Collection at 4 p. m., February 2

Hang a handkerchief on the knob of your front door if you have any books to contribute to men in the United States armed services when the second annual Victory Book Campaign collection is conducted in Cumberland and vicinity Tuesday, February 2.

Such are the instructions issued by Miss Florence Ann Schlott, Girl Scout executive, and Ray C. Lalor, Scout executive of Potomac Council, Boy Scouts of America, who are in charge of arrangements for the door-to-door collection next week.

The handkerchief idea was devised as a time-saver and makes it unnecessary for the Girl or Boy Scouts to knock at every door to pick up books.

600 Will Participate. Approximately 300 Boy Scouts and a like number of Girl Scouts will participate in the collection.

Urges American People To Take More Interest in Their Government

"Every individual extravagance here on the home front lessens to that degree the manpower that can be used to win the war, and by the same token, every extravagance of government lessens to that degree our chances of a complete and early victory," Jennings Randolph, representative to Congress from West Virginia, told an audience of over 300 at the annual meeting of Central Young Men's Christian Association.

Speaking as a member and active supporter of the Y.M.C.A. since he was fourteen years of age, Rep. Randolph referred to the contribution the Y.M.C.A. throughout the country has made in building strong, courageous and Christian manhood.

In the present war, he observed, the Y.M.C.A. is active on thirty-one fighting fronts, bringing relief and help and comfort to prisoners of war, whether they be enemy or troops of the United Nations. He referred briefly to the Salem, W. Va., Y.M.C.A. where he was first a member an dthen to the Elkins, W. Va., association, with which he has long been associated, as Elkins is his hometown. He also mentioned his contact with the Y.M.C.A. in the nation's capital.

Cites Cost of War. Reaching the theme on which he spoke, "America at War," Rep. Randolph said, "Let's look at the cost of killing a man in war. During Napoleon's time, it cost $300 to kill a man. During the Civil War, the cost was $5,000. In the First World War, the cost was $55,000. During the present conflict, the cost is $110,000."

Then speaking of the total cost of this "global war," to Americans, he stated "If the war lasts another year an d a half, we will have spent a total of two hundred and fifty billions of dollars. Forty two billion has already been appropriated for the War department alone. In the last war, this country spent only thirty-five billions in all."

Citing these figures, Rep. Randolph then predicted that "our way of life will change as a result; our standard of living will be lowered and this country never again will bear the cost of such a conflict."

The second phase of his theme was referred to as "mechanization." He explained how warfare has been highly mechanized, how Hitler's hordes were equipped with high speed munitions and armchairs.

Then he quoted figures showing the progress this country has made in this same type of "mechanization for destruction," so the needs of Russia, China, Great Britain and this country can be met to assure victory.

"America at war, means manpower. Every ounce of manpower and womanpower available is needed and is being steadily converted to the task of winning the war," the speaker exclaimed.

Denounces Labor Strikes. Denouncing emphatically the labor strikes which have interfered with production, Rep. Randolph said "33,000,000 man days have been lost in industries by strikes. This loss has delayed the war effort and has hampered the whole nation in its effort to end the holocaust."

Praising the efforts of loyal labor and responsible unionism, Randolph explained that "the American people are responsible for the strikes and loss of manpower because we as a people have permitted aliens, racketeers and saboteurs to gain a foothold in some unions."

These people, he exclaimed, (referring directly to Harry Bridges and Mellett,) both of whom are aliens, should be shorn of their hold on the laboring people and driven out of the country. They represent themselves as champions (Continued on Page 17, Col. 5)

Governor Names James P. Kenney Trial Magistrate

Frostburg Tobacconist Will Succeed the Late Joseph Feldman

Appointment of James P. Kenney, 63, of 86 West Main street, Frostburg, a trial magistrate to succeed the late Joseph Feldman, was announced yesterday by Governor Herbert R. O'Connor in a letter to Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., of this city, chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee of Allegany county.

A native of Westernport, son of the late James and Catherine Egan Kenney, the newly appointed magistrate has resided in Frostburg practically all his adult life.

Since 1900 he has engaged in the tobacco business and for the past forty years he has operated a tobacco store at the same stand, 143 East Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenney have three sons in the armed services. They are Pvt. First Class Paul Kenney, United States Air Corps, Walnut Ridge, Ark.; Pvt. First Class James Kenney, Jr., stationed at Fort Campbell, Ky., and Pvt. Joseph Kenney, at the Officers Training School, Fort Benning, Ga.

Four other sons and two daughters are Francis A. Kenney, of the United States Employment Service, this city; Loyola, at home; Bernard, Raymond and Rita, employed at the Celanese plant and Mary Catherine Kenney, school teacher at Kempston, Md.

Chairman Bruce lauded the governor's appointment of Kenney and referred to it as being a "merited one which will prove popular with his many friends in Allegany county."

Sale of Church At Flintstone Upheld by Court. Opinion Holds Procedure at Conference Was Legal and Proper. An opinion was issued yesterday in circuit court in the case of Nora E. Wigfield et al. vs. Elmer LeRoy Thompson et al., which settles the dispute in the sale of the Flintstone Methodist Episcopal church property.

The court opinion, handed down by Associate Judge William A. Huster, dismisses the bill of complaint filed by Nora E. Wigfield and others and also rescinds its order to restrain trustees from making the sale.

The bill of complaint was filed October 12, 1942, when a group of residents of Flintstone asked for a restraining order to prevent sale of the property to the Rev. Edgar Barrack for $300.

In the opinion, the court explains that testimony and review of church records and title showed the sale had been conducted in a legal and proper manner and that since the consolidation of Methodist church, it had been agreed that the property could be sold.

The court found that at a meeting of the Quarterly conference, September 17, 1942, called in a legal way, all the trustees of the church except two were present as were the usual number of members of the congregation. At that meeting the Rev. Mr. Barrack submitted his bid of $300 and it was accepted unanimously by voice vote.

The court also found that Nora E. Wigfield is not a trustee of the church and that Miss Lena Twigg one of the complainants is a trustee and that she voted to sell the building. Another complaint, Rena Perrin, formally withdrew her appearance in the case.

Delay in Garbage Collection Here Caused by Snow.

Trucks Will Not Visit South End until Next Tuesday, Dougherty Says

There will be no regular collection of garbage and ashes in the section south of Baltimore street tonight, due to the fact that the heavy snowfall of the past two days has disrupted regular schedule, it was announced last evening by Emmett A. Dougherty, contractor.

The garbage trucks will not be able to get around to the South End section until next Tuesday night, Dougherty said.

Collection of garbage was slowed down by the seven-inch snowfall on Wednesday night when the trucks were only able to visit a portion of the West side. Dougherty said he hoped that the collection in that section could be completed last night and a part of the North End section visited. The work in North End will be completed tonight, thereby forcing postponement of the South End collection until next week.

Dougherty related that collecting garbage is a messy job in this kind of weather, especially when plows throw the snow over the curbs and bury the containers, giving the collectors extra work. The men get soaking wet from the melting snow and the trucks get stuck in the deep snow whenever they pull over to the curb.

After a truck is loaded it must travel out the Oldtown road to the dumping ground which is located about five miles from the central part of the city.

Dougherty said that an average of thirty-eight loads a night is moved by his trucks.

Four Allegany County Measures Are Introduced

Airport Bond Issue and Board of Education Bills Are Included

See's Measures Would Impose Fines for Inaccurate Clocks, Scales

Four bills were introduced yesterday in the Maryland House of Delegates by members of the Allegany county delegation. They are:

1. Authorizing the mayor and city council of Cumberland to float a bond issue of $150,000 for the completion of the municipal airport at Wiley Ford, W. Va.

2. Providing that the board of education in Allegany county be elected by the qualified voters of the county rather than being appointed by the governor.

3. Making it a misdemeanor to maintain for public use a clock which is inaccurate or not posted with a warning sign.

4. Making it a misdemeanor to maintain for use by the public a scale which was inaccurate or not posted with a warning sign.

The airport was a Work Projects Administration project on which work was ordered abandoned by the presidential edict abolishing the WPA.

Sleeman Is Sponsor. This bill was introduced by Delegate Jonathan Sleeman, Frostburg Republican.

Bonds would be in denominations of $1,000 each, and bear interest at a rate of not more than four per cent, payable semi-annually.

The bill provides that the mayor and council may levy a tax on assessable property to pay the interest and retire the bonds at maturity.

It is an emergency measure, which would become effective on passage by three-fifths of the members of the assembly.

City officials are also seeking federal aid to complete the airport. The school bill was offered as an amendment to the public
